UPRISING BY FOES OF REDS

Thousands of Peasants and Soldiers Slain in Iron Rule by Trotzky

Berlin, via London, Jan. 22.—A counter-revolution has broken out at Petrograd, according to a report received here today. The anti-Bolshevik forces there have proclaimed a general strike for Friday.

By International News Service.

Stockholm, Jan. 22.—Iron discipline is being imposed upon the Bolshevik armes by Leon Trotzky, and in the past three months 2,000 soldiers have been shot for insubordination and neglect of drill, said a dispatch from Moscow today, quoting the secretly published Bolshevik newspaper Obnovlenio.

Mutinies in the Bolshevik armies are frequent, but are attended with terrible punishments. After explaining the defeat of the Bolshevists at Perm the newspaper tells of the nature of disciplinary methods. Flogging and tortures are used extensively. Great numbers of youths are being seized and whipped for not answering the demand for conscripts. At Kusskove a number of mutineers barricaded themselves in the home of Count Scheremetiev. It was stormed by Red Guards and seventy of the mutineers were executed.

Chinese executioners are attached to every battalion of the Bolsheviki army, and are given liberty to tor-

Search Mines for Missing British Prisoners

Berlin, Jan. 22—British commissions are scouring Germany in search for straggler bands of prisoners of war who may still possibly be detained as involuntary workers in mines. Even the asylums are being searched. It is believed, however, that not more than about 100 of the missing will be found. I understand that the British government has sent a list of all of the missing German prisoners and the German government has been warned not to destroy the German records of captives. After the search for the living has been concluded the British will begin searching German graveyards.

G.A.R. WOMEN AID PETITION FOR WAR BONUS

Hearty endorsement of the Boston American "Soldiers' Friend" petition for six months' pay for soldiers upon their discharge from the service, now favored by more than 142,000 men and women, is given by Mrs. Flora Chapin of Worcester, State president of the Women's Relief Corps of the Grand Army of the Republic in Massachusetts.

Not only does Mrs. Chapin put the unmistakable stamp of her organization's approval upon the proposal to give six months' bonus to returning war heroes, but she has given her full approval to the circulation of copies of this petition in the 175 posts where the Grand Army and its auxiliary, the Women's Relief Corps, meet. Mrs. Chapin will also speak at various gatherings in the State in behalf of the petitions.

"We cannot do too much for the soldiers," said Mrs. Chapin in discussing with the American why the solid support of the State should be given to this petition.

"They gave up their all for us. It is the duty of citizens to sign this petition, and the Boston American

MOTHER IS KILLED BY GRIEF

Roxbury Woman, Heart-Broken Over Missing Girl, Expires at Prayer in Church

Mrs. Alice E. Rhell is dead of a broken heart at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Reardon, of No. 8 Sewall street, Roxbury.

She succumbed to grief over the mysterious disappearance two and one-half years ago of her nine-year-old daughter, Dorothy Rhell, a toe-dancer of wonderful grace and charm.

The long-continued strain was too much for the mother's heart to bear. The breaking point came while the mother was on her knees in prayer at the Mission Church in Roxbury.

Stricken while she was making her oft-repeated appeal for the restoration of her little girl, the mother collapsed. She was able to get out of the church to the street. There she collapsed again. She was taken home. To her own mother she gasped:

"I am dying. My troubles are over."

Then she died in her mother's arms, her hope unfulfilled that she would once more in this life see the gifted child whom she had loved so devotedly.

Dorothy Rhell disappeared on her ninth birthday, June 14, 1916. She was a pupil at the Farragut School in Roxbury. Mrs. Rhell had arranged to take the child to the circus after school as a birthday treat.

Later Mrs. Rhell said:

"The day she went away I kissed her as she was starting for school. She returned the kiss and said she would come directly home after school. When she did not return I went to the school. Some of her playmates told me that her father had come to the school and had sent in word to the teacher to have her dismissed early. Dorothy was ex-

BOMB IS SEIZED BY POLICE

Roxbury Printer Who Took Crude Invention to Work Is Placed Under Arrest

A crude bomb, made of a milk bottle filled with smokeless powder, match heads, scrap iron, nails and pebbles, was seized by the police today in the printing establishment of E. D. Abbott Company, No. 181 Massachusetts avenue, this city.

Peter A. Bailey, 21, of No. 48 Warren street, Roxbury, who was said to have made the bomb, was arrested and committed to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital.

The man told Federal authorities that he intended offering his invention to the Navy Department, to be used as an aerial bomb or hand grenade.

The police, on the other hand, declare that Bailey was angry because of his failure to get into service, owing to sickness.

Bailey, who is a printer, went to work this morning, carrying the bomb with him. Fellow employes saw it on his bench and at once notified the police. Two officers were sent to the printing plant from the Boylston street station. When they entered the room where Bailey was at work he made a dive for the bomb, but the police were too quick for him.

They took possession of the bottle and placed Bailey under arrest. He was taken to the Back Bay station where he was questioned by the police, Daniel F. O'Connell, United States explosive inspector; Matthew L. McGrath of the Department of Justice and officers of the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

Walter L. Wedge, State Explosives Inspector, examined the bomb which he found to be made of a quart milk bottle. This bottle was filled nearly to the brim with smokeless powder, match heads and sticks, pebbles, scrap iron and nails, with pieces of broken glass. It was said that if the bottle had been thrown to the floor, the pebbles would have ignited the match heads, which in turn would have fired the powder. It is thought that some of the recent fires in the metropolitan district may possibly have been set by this or a similar means.

Bailey told the Federal authorities that he was experimenting. He said that he took the powder from shotgun shells which he had purchased. It was brought out that ten years ago he sustained a severe fall, striking on his head. He appeared to be mentally deficient.

Shaw Reveals Pact That Bound Russia and England

London, Jan. 22.—At the end of the preceding article, having traced the direct course of the policy by which the British empire broke the power of Germany, I promised to explain the entanglements which made it impossible at any moment before the end of the war to lay that policy bare to the British public, the British Parliament or the British historian.

To begin with, the jingo Imperialists and the genuinely liberal Imperialists were at cross-purposes. Lord Haldane, a Scot, and by far the ablest member of the Im-

HEROES. HOME ON MELITA. ASK FOR WORK

Three of the nurses who returned on the troopship Melita today, two of them who became brides in France. Left to right—Mrs. Clay R. Murray, formerly of Sayre, Pa., who has been eighteen months in war service; Miss Frances N. Rouillon of Waterbury, Ct., and Mrs. Addison H. Bissell, formerly of Guelph, Ont. The war brides' husbands, who came from New York, are still abroad.

By RALPH P. YOUNG.

"What is New England doing for the fellows coming back?"

It was the first question fired at the reporters who boarded the troopship Melita when it docked at Commonwealth Pier today with 1,600 troops.

A broadside of questions from a thousand returning doughboys, swarming the decks of the big Canadian-Pacific liner, checked eager queries of the newspaper folk.

EAGER TO GET JOBS BACK.

"Do we get our jobs back? How much are beans in Boston now? When do we get out? Where do we go from here?"

And scores more.

"What happened to General Edwards?"

"General Edwards sends his love to every man in the 26th Division aboard the ship," called back a member of the boarding party. Cheers answered the message.

While whistles sirened their deafening accompaniments, the big vessel poked her nose into the slip and disgorged her horde of khaki-clothed fighters.

The men were immediately placed on board special trains and started for Camp Devens, where they will be discharged or sent to the cantonment nearest their homes.

Following the schedule established by the Canada, the Melita warped into the dock at 9 o'clock, after swinging to her anchor in the stream all night.

Crowds of sailors and civilians welcomed the home-coming soldiers as they came ashore, and their cheers

MEN A UNIT ON TEST VOTE ON 48 HOURS

Lawrence, Jan. 22—Representatives of the operators employed in the Washington Mill, one of the plants owned by the American Woolen Company, today unanimously voted for a 48-hour week with 54-hour pay, at a meeting presided over by Agent Robert S. Todd.

At the Wood Worsted Mill 100 delegates, representing all departments, were addressed by Agent Walter M. Lamont, and withheld their decision until later.

At the Washington Mill, Agent Todd, assisted by William E. Halliwell, Ernest Johnson and Superintendent Holland Gath, advised the fifty-four delegates not to accept the 48-hour week. He said it meant a loss of six hours to both mill owners and operators. Nevertheless the delegates decided in favor of it, although it was understood that the mills would not grant this demand. The electricians also demanded a flat 10 per cent increase.

The workers' representatives were addressed by Agent James Boothman in the Ayer mill, and Joseph A. Clapp in the Prospect mill. In each place it was understood that the delegates voted for the 48-hour week with 54-hour pay.

GRAY, STONEHAM TREASURER, SENTENCED

Wesley P. Gray, for five years town treasurer of Stoneham, pleaded guilty in Superior Criminal Court in East Cambridge today to the larceny of $18,500 of the town funds, and was sentenced to State Prison for from five to seven years.

John P. Haley, a clerk in the treasurer's office under Gray, and charged with the larceny of $5,000, did not plead today and his case was continued for trial next week.

When it became known that Judge Dubuque would pronounce sentence today the courtroom was crowded with Stoneham residents and others attracted by the notoriety given the affair. Gray was represented by H. H. Patten of Stoneham.

Gray was arrested while a member of the United States Merchant Marine after he had been indicted. The government charged that the money was taken in cash and Liberty Bonds between Jan. 1, 1914, and Oct. 16, 1918, when Gray went into the service.

PUT DEATH BY GAS UP TO WIFE

Charge Made That Mrs. Lee Started Leak in Meter While Man Slept

Mrs. Nora Lee of South Boston was held for the Suffolk Grand Jury today on a charge of murder in one of its most bizarre forms—that of driving a small pail hole in a gas metre so that the gas escaped into the room and killed her husband, Coleman Lee, as he slept.

The method of this alleged murder—as held by the police—is not unmindful of the biblical tale of Jael, the wife of Heber the Kenite, who lured Sisera, the enemy captain, into her tent and drove a nail into Sisera's temple as he slept.

The difference, as the police tell the story, between the taking off of Sisera of old and Coleman Lee of the present was that the modern nail was driven into the gas meter to let out a flow of homicidal gas, a slower method than Jael's, but equally effective in the end.

Mrs. Lee stoutly denied being responsible in any way for her husband's death. She testified to abuse that he had visited upon her.

In final assertion of her innocence Mrs. Lee declared that only a few nights before her husband's death she had dragged him from a burning couch on which he was asleep and to which his pipe had set fire. She said that this act proved her innocence of any plan to take her husband's life.

The Lee home is at No. 66 Baxter street, South Boston. On Tuesday morning, January 14, Mrs. Lee reported to the police that she had found her husband dead in the kitchen and that the kitchen was filled with illuminating gas, which had escaped from the meter in the kitchen.

It was thought at first that Lee's death was due to suicide. But investigation was begun. Sergeant Anthony Fitzpatrick examined the premises. It was announced that he had found a small hole punctured in the lead pipe connection of the gas meter and that he had also found a hammer and small punch or nail near the meter.

Mrs. Lee was arrested on a charge of having murdered her husband by puncturing the meter and letting gas into the room. Mrs. Lee was held for continued hearing today.

Mrs. Lee said on the stand that her husband came home the evening of January 13, called her names, then went to sleep in the kitchen. Mrs. Lee said she had used a separate chamber for some time. The next time she saw her husband, she went on, was when she discovered him dead in the morning.

There was police testimony to the effect that Mrs. Lee had said she was glad her husband was dead, but she was sorry to have him die in that manner.

3,000 VICTIMS IN LEMBERG OUTBREAK AGAINST JEWS

New York, Jan. 22.—Charges that the Polish press withholding facts concerning the anti-Jewish outbreak in Lemberg, in which hundreds of Jews perished, were contained in a cablegram received here today by the Jewish Daily Forward from Abraham Cahan, editor of that paper, who is in Paris. In the cable Cahan alleges that he had learned from eyewitnesses that 100 Jews were killed outright, 260 were burned to death and the total victims numbered 3,000.

WILL CONTINUE BLOCKADE TO FORCE TERMS ON GERMANY

Allies in Complete Agreement Now As to Policy Toward Teutonic Power.

By JAY JEROME WILLIAMS.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Jan. 22.—Complete agreement has been reached at the peace conference regarding the continuation of the allied blockade of Germany.

This does not conflict with the American contention that the embargo should be lifted to a certain extent to permit the shipment of a limited amount of foodstuffs into Germany to end the present shortage of fats and also to allay the spread of terrorism.

But the blockade remains the one single powerful weapon in the hands of the Allies so far as making Germany come to terms when it is time to sign the peace treaty. Upon this point there is definite unanimity of purpose.

The statesmen gathered here reckon that Germany, however rigorous she may deem the indemnity assessed against her or how dreadful may appear the cession of territories to be demanded as well as the ultimate disposition of her navy, will be compelled to submit gracefully through fear of the maintenance of the blockade.

Germany's financial life depends on trade, and trade is extinct as long as the blockade remains in force.

The potency of the blockade as a peaceful weapon is fully recognized, and latest reports from Germany have demonstrated its efficiency. That country is entirely bereft of materials necessary for the resumption of normal life. But should the blockade be lifted immediately, the world might wake up to the fact that a new and perhaps quite as dangerous a Germany had emerged from the old empire.

In this connection serious consideration is being given to the question of cable and mail censorship now effective. Were this censorship lifted before the associated powers are fully confident that they had got a good grasp on the bird which it took them so long to catch, there might be a remarkable disappearance of German-owned securities and supplies, like in the neutral countries, and from the disposition of these under allied scrutiny must come a large part of the initial indemnities from Germany.

Peace Messages to United States Are Held Up by Censor

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Jan. 22.—There are indications that all messages destined for the United States are not getting through. Many dispatches are held up altogether. Others are routed.

Americans here look to the American commissioners to cure this situation and make good its promises to see to it that all news gets through.

Little enough information is getting out of the peace commission as it is. If what little is given out is to be held up for any reason whatever, the American people are likely to remain in darkness as to what is going forward here till the whole matter is settled and the treaty is signed, sealed and delivered.

1,500 Peasants Slain by Bolsheviki in the Moscow Districts

By International News Service.

Stockholm, Jan. 22.—Fifteen hundred peasants have been slain by Bolsheviki in the provinces south of Moscow, and a serious uprising is in progress. Scores of villages have been burned.

Moscow is practically surrounded by the rebels, who are gaining recruits especially in the Tula, Koslov and Ryazan. A former school master is leading the rebels.

In Tula the peasants are awaiting reinforcements from the south and intend to march on Moscow. They are defending a fortified line along the Oka river, Serpukhov and Kolomna.

Red Guards are trying to suppress the killing of women and children.

Valentine is twenty-one years of age, married and has one child.

Conference Reports Satisfactory Progress on Russian Question

Paris, Jan. 22.—"Satisfactory progress" was made in the discussion of the Russian situation by the peace conference, says the official communique.

The conference hopes to conclude its deliberations on Russia at tomorrow's sessions, the statement says.

In some of the greatest crises of the war, when the offensives were under way, and the world waited breathlessly for official word of the results of the day's fighting, the War Office communiques, when they finally came, usually began with the phrase "satisfactory progress was made." Frequently that was all they said.

HUB ARTILLERY HOME WITH THE 55TH

By J. P. LANEHART.

Hoboken, N. J., Jan. 22.—The Boston artillery, or the 55th Regiment, C. A. C., made up of men from New England and eight companies from the various forts around Boston harbor, reached "home" today on the White Star liner Celtic from Brest, France.

There was only one unpleasant occurrence to mar the return journey of the Boston artillery, and that occurred when the boat was two days out of Brest. It was the death of two of the regiment from pneumonia, following influenza. The men were Sergeant William J. Phillips of the Headquarters Company and Corporal Fred P. Goyette of Battery C. The ship's butcher also died on the trip across. His body was buried at sea. The remains of the two soldiers were brought home and will be sent to their homes for burial.

NEW OFFICERS IN COMMAND.

The officers of the 55th Regiment are now mostly "strangers" in the outfit, all of the old personnel having been detached from the regiment before it started to prepare for the journey home and these men will be kept overseas until after peace has been completed.

The regiment arrived today under the command of Colonel John L. Hobbs of the regular army, who has been in command since October. He succeeded Colonel Granville Sevier, who took the place of Colonel James P. Howell of Boston, who took the regiment overseas.

Wherever there was heavy fighting to be done the 55th was always on the job, according to the reports of the officers and men, and everyone spoke in high praise of Mess Sergeant Mark Damon of Hull, Mass., who while with Battery A on the Mont Faucon front did one of the most heroic acts of the war.

It happened this way. The battery was firing shells from the big French 155s as fast as it could, and suddenly a primer holder caught fire. This in turn set fire to a powder charge which threatened to destroy the gun and kill all of the men nearby. A near panic resulted, but Damon dashed to the gun and shut the breech block, just as the charge exploded harmlessly out through the muzzle. For this act of heroism he was publicly cited before the entire regiment and has been recommended for the D. S. C.

Chaplain Frederick M. Cutler, formerly of the Old South Church, Boston, returned with the regiment.

SING REGIMENT SONG.

As the regiment left the ship the boys all chorused the regiment song, composed by Private Joseph Searles, formerly of the 55th, but now with the 151st Ammunition train. It follows:

We hit the trail of the Kaiser,
We are Yankees thru and thru,
We showed the sons of Germany
What the U. S. A. can do.
Now our mothers, wives and sweethearts
Will be some proud to say
That the boys from Massachusetts
Were the first to lead the way.

A "fighting regiment" was the 55th Artillery, from New York city, whence it sailed March 25, 1918, in the giant Cunarder Mauretania for Liverpool, where, on April 7, it landed.

They came to the battlefield at the crucial hour of the allied cause, and they continued until the enemy was crushingly defeated. Their path of battle led through shell torn and bloody fields. They were constantly in action day and night (to quote from the citation) "responding with self-sacrificing devotion to duty and superb efficiency" and their "accurate and powerful support was one of the main factors in opening the way for the infantry to advance."

The "tremendous volume of fire, the skilful arrangement of all objectives and the perfect co-ordination with the infantry and machine guns were a model of completeness." Finally they occupied positions from which the Metz-Mezieres railroad was brought under interdiction fire. And so helped to "win the greatest battle in history."

Brockton's New Booze Has Kick Like Maud's

Brockton, Jan. 22.—National prohibition has no terrors for Brockton. Brockton has a new solution all its own. It is a mixture of Jamaica ginger and cider.

There are people in Brockton and Bridgewater who say it has a kick like Opper's mule "Maud." At any rate, there was enough samplers of the new beverage last week to compel the police to investigate.

Following a roundup Arthur A. Thibault of Main street pleaded guilty in court today of selling "intoxicating liquor", and was fined $50. The "intoxicating liquor" was Jamaica ginger, etcetera. Others in court on the same charge pleaded not guilty. They were held for a hearing January 29. The men were Morris London, Main street; Sperr Kovitz, Main street, and Keve Reiser, Lincoln street.

FIXING PRICES OF FOOD 'JOKE' SAY GROCERS

Food price regulation was a "farce and a joke" which nearly drove 50 per cent. of the retail grocers out of business and which caused the public to pay boosted and excessive prices for many articles of food, President H. A. Spinney of the State Association of Retail Grocers charged today.

Mr. Spinney and representatives of 13,000 grocers in the State appeared before the legislative Committee on Commissions in opposition to a bill to create a State Food Commission with authority to fix prices of foodstuffs. Because of the absence of Representative Leo S. Hamburger, author of the bill, who is ill, the hearing was continued.

"If they hadn't fixed the price of wheat, flour would be selling for $1 or $2 less a barrel," said Wintrop C. Adams, a Boston grocer.

"The tendency of the wheat market is to go down," said C. O. Blood of Lynn, "but it won't go down because the price is fixed. Hardly a grocer made any profit during the past year, and at least 25 per cent. would be forced out of business within a year unless regulation is let down. The grocers are now up against a life-and-death struggle."

H. A. Johnson, a Boston retailer, said: "Forest Hills is acceptable to me if there is going to be any more regulation."

"You may come up here year after year to oppose everything," said Senator James F. Cavanagh of Everett. "Now what do you recommend as a regulation that would be of benefit to the people?"

Mr. Adams said he thought "competition would regulate it."

SPARTACANS IN NEW RIOTS IN BERLIN

Berlin, Jan. 21, via London, Jan. 22.—There was a renewal of rioting here last night. The Spartacans, armed with rifles and hand grenades, attacked the Anhalter station. The fighting spread to Koeniggraetzerstrasse, Dessauerstrasse, Wilhelmsplatz, Albrechtstrasse and Coepenickerstrasse.

At Bremen the laborites disarmed the soldiers and occupied the Town Hall, Stock Exchange, Reichsbank and telegraph and telephone office.

Two regiments of government troops have been ordered to remain in Berlin and protect the government and aid the police.

It is announced that the National Assembly will be held in Weimar on February 6.

Berlin, Jan. 21 (Via London, January 22).—Returns counted up to noon today show the majority Socialists (supporters of Chancellor Ebert's government) far in the lead. Two hundred and sixty-seven constituencies were in, divided as follows: Majority Socialists 114 seats in the National Assembly; Democrats, 55; Clericals, 46; German Nationals, 24; Independent Socialists, 19; German People's Party, 11. Four hundred and thirty-three were chosen.

were only equalled by the enthusiasm of the men in once more stepping foot on American soil.

BIGGEST RECEPTION YET.

Today's reception outclassed all others, even that accorded the Canopic, the first troopship to arrive here. The demonstration at Commonwealth Pier had added features, such as the release of 2,000 good-sized balloons by members of the Red Cross who were on the dock.

Salvation Army workers, armed with blank telegram slips, pencils and blocks of papers, were on hand to receive and send messages to the boys' parents and friends. Red Cross canteen workers served hundreds of gallons of hot coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches.

Several Knights of Columbus secretaries aided the lads in many ways.

The first man to greet the reporters as they went aboard the liner was Private "Pat" O'Neill of the Norwood Fire Department. Private O'Neill was a member of the Headquarters Company, 101st Field Artillery. He left a wife and children to go into the service.

"Bring on those beans," he shouted. "Are we glad to get back? Yes, ask me. Sure, war is all they say it is, but it has nothing on Brest. That place is—well, we are back alive, so why kick?"

HEROES OF THE 26TH HOME.

Private Louis J. Nichols of the Provisional Anti-aircraft Replacement Battery, who lives at No. 13 Aiken avenue, Lowell, would not tell of his own experiences overseas.

"Just get word to my buddy's folks that he is better and coming home," said Nichols. "He is Private George Perkins of No. 12 Orient place, Melrose. He was gassed."

Among the nurses on the troopship were two brides of medical officers, who were married after the armistice, after they had served for eighteen months in the American hospitals. They were Mrs. Clay R. Murray, who until a month ago was Miss Mary Savage Hamilton of Sayre, Pa., and Mrs. Addison H. Russell, who enlisted as Miss Genevieve Cook of Guelph, Ont. The husbands of both live in New York, but the brides will go to their own homes to remain until their husbands return to this country.

AVIATORS ON FURLOUGH.

Among the aviators were many aces. Lieutenant F. R. Knapp and Lieutenant Edwin Ruffle, both of Brooklyn, who have been flying with the British army for two years, came home on a three months' furlough.

Among the boys of the Yankee Division abroad were Private Charles Ryan of Westfield of Co. E, 104th Infantry; Corporal R. W. Murphy of No. 13 Woodland street, Worcester, of Co. C, 101st Infantry, and Private Charles C. Redden, Co. M, 104th Infantry, of Cincinnati, a former Boston boy.

Corporal F. C. Doyle of Company I, 101st Infantry, hails from San Francisco. "But say, I am a Boston boy," he urged. "Gee, it was great to be with my old outfit. I used to belong to the old 'Fighting Ninth' and then moved to 'Frisco, but I came clear across the country so I could go overseas with my old outfit.

"I want to say a word about a Boston boy who was in my company. He was Private John Wilson. I don't know who his people are nor where they live in Boston, but I want them to know if I can that he went out game. We were together at Belleau Wood and it was hell. Wilson was cut to pieces by machine gun bullets, but he was organizing every minute till they stopped him for good."

WINS CROSS FOR BRAVERY.

A modest bearer of the Distinguished Service Cross was Fred Hall of Co. E, 26th Infantry. Hall's home is in Doyon, North Dakota.

"Tell them Jenny Moore is back," called Barry Straus of No. 23 Shirley avenue, Revere.

"Sure, and Abe Kabibble is home again," roared Corporal W. H. Moore, who lives at No. 28 Upham street, Malden. Straus and Moore are pals in the 293d Aero Squadron.

"What is the story at Brest?" the American reporter asked an officer who had spent two weeks there before sailing.

"If you want to describe conditions at Brest, draw the most horrible picture your imagination will allow and I'll wager you won't overdo it," he answered.

GRIEF FOR DAUGHTER KILLS ROXBURY WOMAN

[illegible] That was the last seen of her."

Mrs. Rhell was living at that time with her parents. Her husband, Samuel Rhell, an electrician, was living with his mother in Brookline. It was said that Samuel Rhell left Brookline at the time Dorothy disappeared.

Mrs. Rhell searched far and wide for Dorothy, following clews to New York and other cities, but always being disappointed.

In January, 1916, Mrs. Rhell appealed to the newspapers and police for aid. The story of the missing Dorothy, with her picture, was published broadcast, but nothing was heard.

Dorothy was widely known for so young a child on account of her dancing. She had been a pupil of Lilla Viles Wyman and had appeared in children's dances and similar juvenile gaieties.

Mrs. Rhell, who was thirty-five years old when death ended her grief, was a member of the Daughters of Veterans and was active in patriotic work.

JINGOES WANTED TO RAID GERMAN FLEET BEFORE WAR, SAYS SHAW

IMPERIAL CAMP DIVIDED BY "FRENCH PRESSURE"

perialist trio—Asquith, Grey and Haldane—who conducted the policy, and as Secretary of State for War, the acting partner of the combination, foresaw the war as a horrible possibility to be avoided at all costs short of subjugation. He did what a man, a liberal and a philosopher, could to maintain friendly relations with the Germans, a course which, when the war broke out, earned him bitter vituperation and even threats of impeachment as the friend of Germany.

Hoped Kaiser Would Keep Quiet.

His two English colleagues, who had drifted into the combination under French pressure, accepted this as the correct attitude, and, being peaceable, good-natured persons, hoped the Kaiser would keep quiet.

The jingoes, on the other hand, were eager for a fight with Germany. Many of them advocated a surprise attack on the German fleet about a year before the war.

On the initiative of a German count friendly addresses were exchanged between the leading men of both countries, full of platitudes about Shakespeare and Goethe. A sentence was inserted in the first draft of the British address to the effect that the possession by Germany of a powerful fleet, from being a subject of jealousy could only be regarded as an additional guarantee of civilization.

It was found impossible to obtain the necessary British signatures until that sentence was expunged. Evidently those who refused and those who consented were in very different attitudes.

Men who were making a necessary provision for defence in the event of an attack by Germany were inextricably confused in the same party with men who could hardly be induced to wait for a decent pretext before springing the mine so carefully dug.

Called Surrender "Peace Offensive."

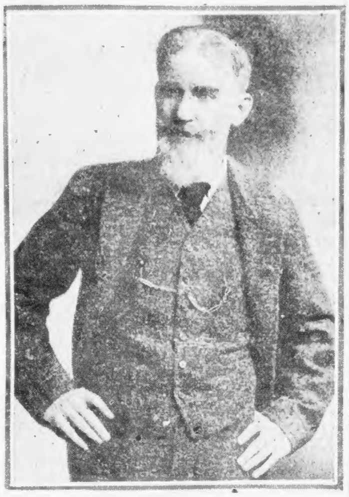
To the latter the avoidance of the war would have been the worst misfortune that could have happened to England. Even when Germany capitulated, they were still under such a terror of peace that they called her surrender "a peace offensive."

There is a good deal to be said for their view from the militarist and British leonine point of view. I am not here criticising it adversely. I am only demonstrating the division of opinion and feeling that existed in the Imperialist camp.

Now, if this had been the only division in the party and in the country it would not have mattered, as both sides were agreed on the practical part of the policy.

Both were equally determined to place the British empire in a position to reduce the German empire to the degree of a second-rate power if she moved toward a hegemony and to keep ahead of her in naval shipbuilding, but there were other sections whose secession would have wrecked the Liberal government and who were fundamentally opposed to the policy.

FAMOUS BRITISH PUBLICIST, GEORGE BERNARD SHAW



Mr. Shaw, in the second of a series of articles, today reviews the ante-war attitude in England and France.

First, there were the commercial non-interventionists, Cobdenites, Gladstonians and George Washingtonians, who objected to meddling in continental quarrels, and knew that huge profits could be made out of a war by neutrals supplying the combatants with war materials.

Prevailed in the United States.

On their position I need not expatiate, as it prevailed in the United States during the first years of the war.

With them on the practical point were the Quakers, led by Sir Edward Grey, probably by class instinct, into the stupendous moral blunder of allowing themselves to be made accomplices in an open and flagrant crime against civilization.

There was and is plenty of British bulldog jingoism in the rank and file of the labor party and among those of its leaders who were trade unionists, and nothing more. The dynamic section to which the party owed its formation and which supplied most of its ideas were Socialists and Internationalists who knew that the traditions of the British lion have no future, and that the interests of all the European proletarians are identical and pacific.

They were, it is true, far more determined to overthrow the Hohenzollernist junkerdom than the jingoes, but they wished to destroy junkerdom, both at home and abroad, whereas the capitalistic jingoes aimed simply at the supremacy of British over German junkerdom.

Further, the Labor party itself was divided into idealist pacifists who wished to stop the war and realists who knew the war must be fought out, and who hoped that when junkers fell out labor would come to its own.

There was one point, however, on which labor was unanimous and irreconcilable. The Liberal Imperialists had been led by their military advisers, by French pressure and, in the case of Sir Edward Grey, probably by class instinct, into the stupendous moral blunder of allowing themselves to be made accomplices in an open and flagrant crime against civilization committed by the French republic.

This was nothing less than an alliance with the abominable despotism of the Russian Czardom.

On the suface, the military advantages of this alliance seemed unquestionable. Russia commanded the eastern frontier of the Grman and Austrian empires and could thus complete the famous encirclement (Einkreisung which was the master stroke of the allied strategy. No better illustration could be found of the shallowness of professional military realism. The Czardom, long obsolete and rotten with corruption, cruelty, ignorance and the incoherence; contradiction and weakness which are necessary conditions of autocracy conducted as it must be by thousands of deputy autocrats in no sort of organic relation to one another, was tottering on the brink of revolution. As the Labor party well knew.

It was, therefore, perilously untrustworthy as a military ally. Besides, it was clearly the business of western Europe to support Germany in the interest of civilization against a barbarous anachronism like the Czardom. No western power could conspire with Russia to overthrow Germany without putting itself hopelessly in the wrong morally, unless it could prove there was no safe alternative, and that self-preservation drove it to this desperate step. But no such proof was possible.

Needed an Additional Ally.

It is true that France and England needed an additional ally. They were faced by a three-fold alliance—of Germany, Austria and Italy, the triplice—and the Kaiser was cultivating a ridiculous but dangerous entente with Islam, which meant Turkey.

A triple alliance was, therefore, necessary to England and France, but there was an alternative to an alliance with Russia, and a very obvious one. To a democrat, if not to a country house diplomatist, that alternative was an alliance with the United States of America. Events have proved that this was the right alternative, not only morally, but militarily.

Why was it not chosen? Well, there were diplomatic as well as strategic reasons against it. The United States were still in the Washingtonian phase of non-intervention, and the imperialism of the late Colonel Roosevelt could not see very far. Though it could see very red, it could see just far enough to understand it was not America's business to maintain Britain as the ruler of the seas and holder of the European balance of power. The United States had no more interest in these British traditions than the central empires themselves. To bring them into the alliance it would have been necessary to appeal to their interest in the peace of the world and in the substitution of federal republicanism for empire as the prevalent form of government in Europe. An alliance with Russia was quite out of the question.

Took to the Russian Alliance.

There was nothing for it but either remodel the anti-German combination so as to include America or leave it as it was and accept the French alliance with Russia as part of it.

Such a remodelling was beyond Sir Edward Grey's capacity and highly uncongenial to his class traditions and sympathies. As a typical British Junker, he took to the Russian alliance as a duck takes to water, and Russia, with the French republic in one pocket and the British empire in the other, abandoned the little self-restraint which the scruples of the democratic west had hitherto compelled her to impose on herself and let herself go in Persia and elsewhere with the certainty that everything to her discredit would now be kept out of the British and French papers.

From this time forth the London Times no longer hailed the assassination of grand dukes and governors of Finland with a very thinly paraphrased "Served him right," and Russia's reputation rose as her conduct grew worse.

Yet the attempt at concealment was only half successful. Nothing could smother the thundering voice of Tolstoy nor silence the thousand minor voices that clamored for judgment on the vilest surviving tyranny in Europe. Paris swallowed a visit from the Czar and even made much of him, but when he proposed a visit to England the agitation against him was so furious that Mr. Asquith dared not allow him to land, much less confess to the Labor party and to the people that the Liberal Imperialists had virtually joined hands with the Czar in a secret compact against a much more civilized neighboring state.

Meant to Be Misleading

The Russian connection thus forced him to a secrecy which did not stop short of flat denials made by himself and Sir Edward Grey in reply to questions in the House of Commons on more than one occasion that there was any binding engagement between Britain and France. The two powers actually went to the length of exchanging letters stating formally that there was no binding engagement, so that these denials might be technically true.

But none the less they were misleading and were meant to be misleading. A true reply to the question would have run: "There is no binding engagement between England and France in the legal sense, but if Germany attacks France, whether through Belgium or not, and England does not send the British fleet and an expeditionary force to France's aid, England will be dishonored to the last page of her history."

GOT $50.81? IT'S YOUR SHARE OF U.S. WEALTH

Washington, Jan. 22.—Have you your $50.81? You should have that much if you have your share of the money in circulation, according to the annual report of the comptroller of the currency, John Skelton Williams, made public today.

He says there are $5,379,400,000 in circulation, which is an increase of $5.07 per capita over the figures in the 1917 report.

In his report he suggests legislation making twenty-five cents the minimum charge on a bank loan, so next time you borrow $10 for thirty days, it will cost you a quarter. And, moreover, he recommends vacations and rotations for bookkeepers.

The country's banking power is nearly two and a half times as great as in 1890, amounting in June, 1918, to the staggering total of $39,082,000,000, an increase of 13 per cent. or $4,609,000,000 over the previous year.

Last year's government bond issues raised more than six times as much as was raised during the entire Civil War, at half the interest rate. National banks for the year made gross earnings of $813,997,000, an increase of $298,373,000 over 1914.

I. W. W. ORDERED TO RUN DOWN RAIDERS

Springfield, Jan. 22.—The local lodge of the Industrial Workers of the World received authorization today from the National I. W. W. organization at New York to hire detectives and "go the limit" financially in an effort to fix responsibility for the recent mysterious raid upon the local lodge rooms and seizure of papers and other property.

If the raiders are found the local lodge is instructed to enter prosecution.

George E. Kelleher of Boston, chief of the New England division of the Department of Justice, has declared no men of his division had taken part in the raid.

Secretary Bernow of the local lodge, whose home was also raided, declared today, however, that the local organization had information that men of the New England division were concerned in the raid.

Announcement was made that the property taken in the raid had been returned by two men representing themselves as expressmen. Bernow now says that examination of the returned goods showed that only about one-tenth of the property taken by the raiders was sent back.

Trailing the missing nine-tenths, the I. W. W. members say, will be another feature of their proposed following up of the case.

Progressives Win Point in Fight on Seniority

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Progressives of the Senate won a sweeping victory in the Republican Senatorial conference today when the appointment of a committee to consider ways and means of abolishing the seniority rule in the Senate was decided upon.

The decision of the conference makes the claim of Senator Penrose to the chairmanship of the Senate finance committee precarious. Also it indicates the adoption of the Norris resolution, or some similar measure to break up the present concentration of power in the hands of the oldest members of the Senate. The appointment of the committee of five members was left in the hands of Senator Lodge.

MEDFORD DANCE HALL PERMITS ARE REVOKED

Mayor Benjamin F. Haines of Medford today revoked the licenses of all dance halls in that city because of conditions disclosed by the police, and in the future licenses for public dances are to be issued only under strict guarantees that such affairs will be conducted with rigid propriety.

The move is regarded as the most significant in the Greater Boston crusade against questionable dance halls since the St. James exposure. The Board of Aldermen of Medford, on motion of Alderman Daly, had previously asked Mayor Haines to revoke the license of the proprietor of Pitman's Hall, and is said to be in complete sympathy with the sweeping action of the city executive.

"No more licenses will be issued proprietors of public dance halls if I can help it," said Mayor Haines today. "These 'blanket' licenses bind the proprietors only lightly, and the conductors of individual dances not at all. I shall issue licenses, instead, to the men and women who intend to hold particular dances, and they will be obliged to furnish me with names of all the promoters of the affairs, and with satisfactory guarantees that the proprieties will be observed."

Alderman Daly, in presenting his resolution to his colleagues, said that he made a trip to Pitman's Hall to watch a Saturday night dance, and that conditions there were deplorable. The alderman told of a crap game in progress in an ante-room, of men under the influence of liquor, and "of language which would offend a man, let alone a young girl."

Alderman Daly says the worst phase of the Saturday night dance in Medford is that "young toughs from all over Greater Boston attend them, and, taking advantage of the free and easy social customs of such places, make the acquaintances of young girls. A conductor told me," continued the alderman, "that a tremendous crowd comes from Charlestown alone, and that he would rather carry a car-load of inebriates than a car-load of young people from the Saturday night dances which are disgracing Medford."

CLEAN UP COAST OF MINES LAID BY U-BOATS

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The last mine laid by the German U-boats during their visits to the Atlantic coast last Summer has been reported swept up by navy mine sweepers, it was learned today.

This mine was picked up ten miles south of Fenwick Island Shoals and was the last of a field of seven sown by the U-117 German submarine, one of the boats which, under cover of darkness, spread lurking death in the path of United States vessels.

Of this field five have been swept up by the navy and two were effective, being the cause of the sinking of the San Saba and Saetia.

The admiralities of the allied nations have been notified by the Navy Department of the removal of this obstruction to commerce and navy men here are confident that no more will be found.

According to the best information that could be obtained from the German charts of the Atlantic coast and from information derived from other sources, the Germans admitted laying forty-seven mines along our coast from Fire Island to Fenwick Island. The navy, however, has already accounted for fifty-seven, and in their search found that the German maps were not wholly reliable guides.

The Germans showed great cunning in laying their fields. The size of the fields ranged from seven to nine mines, and in all cases single mines were placed above and below the field and the remainder grouped inside the area thus formed.

"This method," explained a naval officer today, "was not only effective in getting a vessel either going or coming, but also more than doubled our work in locating and sweeping up the mines."

The German mines succeeded in sinking five American vessels, the San Diego, Saetia, San Saba, Chatarro and the Herbert Pratt.

The battleship Minnesota was struck by a mine, but not sunk. Three other vessels are thought to have been "mined," but this fact has not been definitely settled. They were the Somerstad, Mirlo and Frederick Kellogg.

"There's a Reason"

ALLIES ARE POORLY INFORMED ABOUT RUSSIA, SAYS DR. DILLON

SETTLEMENT OF QUESTION NECESSARY TO PEACE

By DR. E. J. DILLON.

Special Cable to the Boston American and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

(Copyright in the United States and Canada by the Philadelphia Ledger Company. Copyright in Europe by London Daily Telegraph.)

Paris, Jan. 22.—The first great pressure is now being brought to bear on the delegates of the great powers to induce them to come to a definite decision respecting their attitude toward Russia before proceeding to discuss the league of nations or any other scheme of reorganization. Everybody agrees that the present deadlock, if perpetuated, would balk the best-laid scheme of the conference to settle on a durable basis any of the crucial difficulties raised by the war.

The intention lately ascribed to the Allies for equipping some contingents and sending them to occupy the Danzig-Thorn railway has been authoritatively repudiated, and a high-placed statesman with whom I talked the matter over, remarked that it would have been a mistake to adopt this course on account of the distracting difficulties which would infallibly be encountered without first obtaining a measured forecast of the commitments, military and political, which it would involve and then ascertaining whether the allied governments were prepared to make and discharge them.

PROBLEMS INTERWOVEN.

The number of troops adequate for the purpose of protecting the railway would have been small, but the unforeseen conditions might at any moment render it necessary to augment them and undertake an expedition to Russia, against which the Allied governments have all apparently set their faces. The fact is the Russian, German and Polish problems, being closely interwoven with each other, call for a unity of treatment. To deal with them independently one of the other would be to trace the new political map of eastern Europe on water.

Poland, for instance, is menaced on the west by two German armies, who are determined to make a firm stand for Posen and transfer their general headquarters to Bromberg, and on the east and south east by the Bolshevists who, while yielding ground in Russia, are making conquests beyond their own frontiers. If the Allies had seen their way to help the Poles hold the Danzig-Thorn Railway, these dangers might have compelled them to extend the field of operations and attack the Bolshevists in their own country. This would have entailed a Russia military expedition which the governments are at present unanimous in refusing to equip.

POLES UNPREPARED.

The Poles themselves were militarily unprepared to hold these fronts successfully, and were further enfeebled by dissensions between their two governments. This latter source of weakness has been happily displaced by Paderewski, whose success in uniting his countrymen and forming a national government is of good augury and will sensibly facilitate, without, however, solving the Allies' task in eastern Europe, which still bristles with difficulties and dangers. The delegates are beginning to realize that the eastern tangle cannot be unravelled in Paris.

"The national democratic Russian block, consisting of various political parties, whose headquarters are Paris, has addressed a note of thanks to Foreign Minister Pichon for refusing to enter into relations with the Bolshevist authorities, and declaring emphatically that it never considered it possible to conclude a truce or understanding with these men whose place is outside the pale of civilization and not among the delegates of free nations who have fought for the emancipation of the world, nor in a conference which is to assure a stable peace and imperishable guarantee for the rights of peoples."

BOLSHEVISM GAINING ABROAD.

Such manifestations of judgment and sentiment set side by side with the opinion which is also held by some delegates that representatives of all the Russian governments, including that of the Bolshevists, ought to be received and heard, explains how it comes that the conference as a body is reduced to a policy of negation.

That Bolshevism is meanwhile gaining ground in foreign lands is certain. Its armies are on the move, its delegates are negotiating, its apostles are preaching and untoward occurrences are imparting color to their doctrines and force to their aggression. Litvinoff, their former ambassador to London, has offered to negotiate between the western governments and Lenine with a view to a modus vivendi, and the Bolshevists successes in Lithuania and elsewhere have depressed the constructive element of Russia who place their hopes in the Allied powers.

The Journal Temps attributes these embarrassing results to the policy pursued by the Allies, and asks whether they are prepared to allow Poland, so recently called to life, to be crushed as was Rumania, by hostile forces, while they look on unmoved.

BETTER DATA NEEDED.

My own personal view is the Allies have no rounded policy, and possess uncommonly slender data for any. They are wholly dependent on chance advisers for information, which in many cases is volunteered for the sole purpose of proving the correctness of their advice.

I am firmly convinced that it would have been possible any time during the past six months to collect adequate material for judgment, and map out a rational course of action which would have smoothed over the present difficulties, and enabled the conference to agree upon a joint policy for Eastern Europe, including Russia. But as things are now proceeding, the grandiose enterprise undertaken by the world's leaders seems destined to be vitiated from its very inception.

Meanwhile Paris and its guests are manifesting joy at victory, and devotion to what seemes the sacred cause, by dancing, banqueting and drinking toasts to right, justice and peace, unaffected by the symptoms, still slight but not imperceptible, of the coming storm.

STABLE PEACE OR REVOLUTION, SAYS FERRERO

Europe Seething With Warlike Spirit, Declares Noted Italian Historian

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO

(The famous Italian historian.)
(Written especially for Universal Service.)
(Copyright, 1919, by Universal Service.)

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Florence, Italy, Jan. 22.—The most serious problem which we shall have to face at the peace table is the question of guarantees. It is the most serious because it is based not merely upon the views of politicians, but is the outcome of the war itself.

If the danger of a social-political crisis such as the tearing asunder of Russia is to be avoided the peace of Europe must rest upon a stable foundation. It is unthinkable that Europe, after sacrificing ten million lives, should begin the work of reconstructing her wealth and social order with the threat of war hanging perpetually over her head.

LEAGUE BIG QUESTION.

Europe must choose between a sure, permanent peace and social revolution. It is obvious, therefore, that the qestion of the military settlement of Europe of the league of nations—European and American—will be the most important question to be considered at the peace table.

Upon its solution depends the value and permanence of the whole peace treaty.

We must bearin mind that in Russia the war has given birth to a great revolution, that this revolution has assumed a markedly hostile attitude toward the democratic powers of Western Europe and America; that in proportion as the Germans withdraw from the ancient Russian territory this revolution advances westward; that Poland is threatened and, after having been under the yoke of three military empires for over a century, is now in danger of being conquered by Bolshevism; that it is quite possible that the Bolshevist revolution may triumph in at least parts of Germany and Prussia itself.

PROBLEM VERY DIFFICULT.

The problem is terribly difficult. What are the members of the peace congress to do? Are they to follow the example of mathematicians by regarding the problem as solved and frame definite peace terms as if the league of nations were already existent and they had every assurance that it would work without a hitch?

Or are they to act as if the league's successes were still uncertain and the danger of war still imminent? The contradiction is obvious, and in future articles we shall study what influence both this and other difficulties which we have analyzed are likely to have on the peace discussions.

MRS. EDWIN A. SHUMAN MADE K. OF C. CHAIRMAN

Mrs. Edwin Arthur Shuman was made chairman of all committees at a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the K. of C. Service Club held in the Copley Plaza Hotel. A Knights of Columbus Assembly will be held in the Copley Plaza on Falday evening for the benefit of boys in the service. On the same night there will also be another dance for the men on the destroyers now in the harbor. Tonight a dance and entertainment will be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary at the Service Club for the French sailors now in the city.

Rollicking Days in Old^e^ Virginia

"The wharves were the chief meeting-places of the sailors. And there they would gather, puffing their pipes of rich Virginia tobacco, the while telling merry tales of foreign ports and of recent happenings in the colonies."
—Early Virginia Settlers

Oh, how different VIRGINIA tobacco tastes!

Try this: Smoke a cigarette of Virginia tobacco and right afterwards a cigarette of foreign tobacco.

The second cigarette will taste "tame" and flat by comparison.

Virginia tobacco has the real tobacco taste—full of "life" and "sparkle." It nearly doubles the pleasure of smoking. Tobacco men prefer it. You will, too. Try it today in a Piedmont cigarette.

* * * *

"A package of Piedmonts, please."

The All-Virginia Cigarette

Piedmont

20 for 15¢

NOTE—Virginia tobacco, unlike foreign-grown tobaccos, has no import duty to pay. That is why Piedmont's quality does not cost you more. Import duty does not make a cigarette taste any better. Why not get all your money's worth in tobacco quality?

MME. LEBAUDY TRUE TO 'DEMON' SHE KILLED

Mineola, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Marguerite Augustine Lebaudy—exonerated by the Nassau County Grand Jury for the shooting of her husband, Jacques Lebaudy, known as the "Emperor of the Sahara"—believes that the true spirit of the man she slew helped her bear up under the ordeal of waiting for the grand jury's report.

Mrs. Lebaudy declares she will always love this "true spirit" of her late husband. In a brief statement in her broken English, Mrs. Lebaudy said to newspaper men, upon being released from jail to return home:

> I thank you from the bottom of my heart for what you have done for me, and I wish I could speak English better to express my gratitude. I really believe that Jacques helped me much through this ordeal. I feel that he has been freed in spirit and that he has been glad to help me out—that his true spirit, which I love and always shall love, has been near me. I wish to express my appreciation for the many expressions of sympathy which have reached me from all parts of the country.

Another vivid development is the statement that Lebaudy tried to bribe a chauffeur to murder Mrs. Lebaudy and her daughter, Jacqueline, by an automobile "accident."

Among those waiting to testify before the grand jury was Theobald Minzer, chauffeur. He was not called before the jury. But he told Harry W. Moore, counsel for Mrs. Lebaudy, that Lebaudy once tried to engage him as chauffeur for the express plan of running the car, with Mrs. Lebaudy and Jacqueline aboard, into a lake or river deep enough to drown them.

Minzer quoted Lebaudy as having said to him:

"Fix the steering gear so that it would appear like an accident."

Mrs. Lebaudy is resting at her country home, Phoenix Lodge, at Westbury. She may send Jacqueline to boarding school, now that the menace of the father is removed.

It is reported that the mother will return to France after the estate is settled.

WIDOW, FREE, STILL LOVES LEBAUDY'S "TRUE SPIRIT"

Mme. Marie Augustine Lebaudy, who shot and killed her husband, Jacques Lebaudy, the "Emperor of Sahara," leaving the county jail at Mineola, L. I., with her daughter Jacqueline after having been exonerated by the Grand Jury. She killed the "Emperor" in defending Jacqueline, the mother declared. Copyright by International Film Service.

VANDERBILT LOST 14 TEETH BY BEING GASSED

Camp Upton, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., who served as chauffeur for General Pershing and Haig for two months, lost fourteen teeth as a result of being gassed last July. "We were on one of the main roads going to the Belgian front," the millionaire-soldier said, in revealing the story, "when the Germans began sending over gas bombs. By the time I got to safety and began placing my mask in position the gas had taken effect. I lost fourteen of my teeth."

DENIES HARVARD REQUIREMENTS TOO RIGID

Any high school graduate of real ability can gain entrance to Harvard College. This statement was made in a letter to the American by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, in reply to Superintendent Frank V. Thompson of the Boston public schools.

Superintendent Thompson had scored the colleges, particularly Harvard, Amherst and Dartmouth, as excluding many high school pupils by unreasonably hard entrance requirements.

President Lowell's letter reads, in part:

"Although Harvard is the only college in Massachusetts that does not admit by certificate, a really good scholar, from any good non-vocational high school can pass its entrance examinations. The requirements for other colleges of the State are of every grade. At least one of them is, I believe, obliged by its charter to admit all graduates of high schools. It would appear, therefore, that any boy who will profit by a college education can find a college in Massachusetts that he can enter.

"A second point is that the quick and capable youth is retarded and injured in his education if he is held down to the pace of less competent students. It is for his benefit—and, therefore, in a sense, his right—to go as fast and as far as he can, and not be held back by others. There is an advantage, therefore, in having different institutions adapted for different boys going at different rates of speed."

CROUP & SORE THROAT RELIEVED IMMEDIATELY

If Your Child Hawks and Coughs, Simply Apply Camphorole to Throat and Chest

So many people neglect their children's cough until it may develop into whooping cough, croup or bronchitis. Then you would wish you had a jar of CAMPHOROLE handy. It quickly touches the spot and gives sure relief. The remarkable success of CAMPHOROLE is entirely due to Wintergreen, Menthol and Camphor, prepared in a synthetic way to give results.

CAMPHOROLE is recommended for Whooping Cough, Croup, Broncho-pneumonia, Asthma, Sore Throat, Tonsilitis, Pleurisy and Neuralgia. At all druggists. Manufactured in Atlantic City, N. J.

Says Girls Need More Powder for Mental Guns Than Nose

North Adams, Jan. 22.—"Drury girls will not come to school with powder on their faces if I can help it," declares Dr. H. H. Gadsby, principal of Drury High School in this city. And indications are that the edict of the school principal will be obeyed.

For during the early part of the present school year Dr. Gadsby admits he drew aside a few of the young women and offered suggestions in regard to the application of the rabbit's foot to the cheek and nose.

Later, in the course of an article appearing in the school paper Dr. Gadsby ventured the following hint: "I might say that some pupils need more powder in their mental guns and less on —somewhere else."

JOBS TO BE CREATED FOR DISCHARGED SOLDIERS

Jobs will be created for discharged soldiers, sailors and marines at the Thomas G. Plant Shoe factory in Jamaica Plain as fast as the company can push its output, according to a pledge given Mayor Peters today by President William J. McGaffee. Ex-service men with any knowledge of shoe manufacture will be given preference in the hiring of 300 men, and work which might be done later will be done now, as far as possible. Mayor Peters stopped in at the factory on the way from his home in Jamaica Plain, and told President McGaffee that the co-operation of employers of labor was absolutely essential if idleness and its attendant discomforts was not to be the reward of many who had defended the colors with their lives.

ITALY HAS NO CLAIM ON ALBANIA, SAYS PROF. HART

New York, Jan. 22.—Italy's claim to Albania and Dalmatia is "about as good as ours would be if we claimed Denmark," is the opinion of Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of government at Harvard University. Professor Hart made this statement here in an address before the National Geographic Society. Approval of a league of nations was expressed by Professor Hart.

TWO ROXBURY MEN HELD IN ASSAULT CASE

For alleged assault with intent to rob, John J. Ryan of Regent street and William E. Gagen of Conant Street place, both in Roxbury, were held in $2,000 each for the Grand Jury by Judge Hayden in the Roxbury Court today. The alleged victim was Peter P. Graham of No. 646 Parker street, Roxbury. Gagen was charged also with carrying a revolver and pleaded guilty. Patrolman Daniel R. McLean of the Roxbury Crossing Station told the Court that he was called into a bar by Graham after the two men had threatened to "shoot the place up" because Graham refused to buy them a drink.

Petition to the Secretary of War to Send Soldiers Home With Six Months' Pay

Sign this petition, get your friends to sign it, and forward it to the Boston American, 80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

To the Honorable Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War:

The undersigned respectfully urge you to return to their homes as soon as possible the soldiers who have accomplished so brilliantly every object America had in the war.

We urge, also, that you obtain the necessary authority to pay these men their military wages for six months, or for some sufficient period after their discharge from the army until they can obtain useful and remunerative employment.

We urge this as an act of simple justice by a great nation to its heroes.

(Signed)

U. S. DESTROYERS GOING TO CONSTANTINOPLE

Paris, Jan. 22.—Admiral Bristol, U. S. N., left Paris today for Brindisi to take a flotilla of American destroyers to Constantinople. The only American warship hitherto stationed in the Bosphorus was the Scorpion. The British general commanding the allied forces at Constantinople has taken complete control, says a dispatch to the Temps. The same paper calls attention to the fact that Greece has announced her willingness to [illegible] a League of Nations [illegible] that the Dardanelles be made an international passageway.

Is Your Blood Starving For Want of Iron?

Iron is Red-Blood Food—Nuxated Iron Helps Put Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men.

If you were to go without eating until you become weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally starve for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. Without plenty of iron in the blood, no matter how much or what you eat, your food simply passes through you without doing you any good—you don't get the strength out of it and instead of being filled with youthful strength and energy you are weak, nervous and all run-down. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form. But don't take the old kinds of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like Nuxated Iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. You can procure Nuxated Iron from your druggist on an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or your money will be refunded.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How to Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.—Advertisement.

PUBLIC TO AIR COMPLAINTS AGAINST 'L'

Widespread commendation of the American's call for a public mass meeting for all interested in the affairs of the Boston Elevated Railway was heard today.

The American has hired Tremont Temple for Thursday night, and everyone who has a grievance against the management of the Elevated or has any ideas for improvement of the service, or is interested in any way concerning its operation, is invited to attend.

A representative of the Boston American will call the meeting to order and will ask for the election of a chairman. He will then turn the meeting over to those present for whatever action they may deem proper.

MUCH GOOD EXPECTED.

The American believes that good will come of such a meeting. The American will also aid any committee that is appointed by this meeting which indicates a serious constructive attitude.

The American believes that the trustees of the Elevated have failed in a part of their duty to the public in keeping it informed of the conditions under which they are working. Mayor Peters has appointed a committee to co-operate with the trustees and to keep him informed of the situations as they arise with respect to the management of the Elevated. This semi-official body, however, does not satisfy the need of a more general representative committee.

An opinion, no matter how absurd, prevails that the trustees of the road are merely conservators of the property of the stockholders and represent the stockholders and not the public.

A majority of the public believe with the American that public officials cannot hide their light under a bushel, but must keep the public informed as to what they are doing. The public trustees in charge of the Elevated have raised carfare to eight cents and have not been able to improve the service.

TRUSTEES TO CALL MEETINGS.

A considerable minority of the citizens feel that all is not being done that could be done, either to keep the fares down or improve the service. Therefore, the mass meeting is being called in order that conditions may be discussed, and, if possible, remedial ideas secured.

The trustees are proposing to hold meetings in the various parts of the city, after the fashion of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald. This will help to facilitate the operation of the road, but the plan does not quite cover all the necessities of the situation. It does not meet the attitude of those in the community who do not trust the trustees. The meeting tomorrow night will furnish an opportunity to such people to give vent to their complaints, and it is hoped that some constructive criticism may be heard.

"CARS MENACE TO HEALTH."

James S. Mellen of No. 18 Tremont street, Charlestown, chairman of a protest committee, said:

We will have a meeting tonight to take action in regard to the coming protest meeting of the Boston American Thursday night at Tremont Temple. We will advocate betterment of the service all around and cleaner cars, for I think the present cars a menace to public health; proper rolling stock, firm roadbeds and new tracks. The people are paying a higher price for transportation than any city in the country and getting the poorest service possible.

"NEEDS GOOD MAN AT HEAD."

John J. Martin, President of the Exchange Trust Company:

I think the idea of the Boston American to give the people of Boston a chance to get together and thresh out this Boston Elevated matter is a good one.

I believe the raise of fare to 8 cents was wrong in the first place. What the Elevated needs now is one good man who has the public confidence—don't forget that—one big man who has the public confidence, to formulate a financial policy for the road and then put it into practice.

Then slice on all ends. The stockholders would have to bear their share by missing a few dividends and probably labor would have to take its share, too, but the public in the end would get some benefit out of the plan.

Attorney Raymond P. Delano, past president of the Dorchester Board of Trade:

I will be at the big mass meeting of the American on Thursday night to voice my protest against the Elevated. There is no doubt but that we will have a large representation from Dorchester. I think this is the only means to get action in this matter. It is the right way and will be productive of success for the riding public.

BOSTON ACTOR AT HOME IN 'BETTER 'OLE'

By FRED J. McISAAC.

That company which is playing "The Better 'Ole" at the Hollis Street Theatre is an English company—almost. The exception is an important one, R. Derby Holmes, the sergeant-major who orders the three "muskrats" of the trenches around.

Mr. Holmes is a Boston boy.

When the war broke out Holmes, who was of a daring disposition, went to England as chambermaid to a horse upon one of the cattle steamers which plied out of this port.

Once on the other side he enlisted in a London Cockney regiment and went to the front. This was in 1915. After being twice wounded and gassed innumerable times he was honorably discharged and returned to America. Then he went upon the lecture platform, veterans of the war not being as numerous then as now and talked upon trench life in Symphony Hall. He also wrote one of the early war books, "A Yankee in the Trenches."

Mr. Holmes is now a full fledged actor, although he says that it really isn't acting to boss the bunch of Cockney soldiers in "The Better 'Ole" around. Its just like old times.

DRAWN FROM LIFE.

"The characters of Old Bill, Alf and Bert are drawn from life, you know," he said. "I had lots of men like them in my battalion, and it takes me back to the happier days of my army life."

We discussed various things, and I got from Holmes a glossary of Cockney expressions used in the play which are apt to fool some of the folks out front. Here are Mr. Holmes' definitions:

"The Better 'Ole"—The Better Hole, coming from one of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather's early cartoons. Two Tommies, Bill and Alf, are in a shell hole. Overhead are whistling shells and around them are the dead. Alf has apparently been complaining to Bill about the spot in which they have taken refuge, and Bill sarcastically remarks to Alf, "Well, if you knows of a better 'ole, go to it."

Fed-up—Had enough of.

Blighty — Taken from an Indian (India) word, meaning "over-seas," and now applied by the Tommy, to London, or rather home.

Tommy — English pet name for their soldiers.

Wind-up — Extreme nervousness, sudden, involuntary fear.

Junkers—Clink or guard house.

BLINKIN' GOOD SHOW.

Quid—One pound English money or about five dollars.

Blinkin'—Slang expression, equivalent to "darned."

Na pou—No more, finished, taken from the Hindoo.

Wash-out — Just what it implies, wipes out, all gone, etc.

Fag—Cigarette.

Song about Plum and Apple—an old song of the Tommies, as during the first years of the war the usual jam issued to them was made of Plum and Apple, and it became a standing joke of "when the 'ell's it goin' to be strawberry?" The A. S. C. referred to means the Army Service Corps, who are somewhat like the American Quartermaster Corps. They handle all the rations and supplies, and the Tommies accuse them of taking the best of the supplies, of course, in fun.

Pub—Public house or inn, also applies to saloons.

After thinking that over, consider that this is the absorbing story of the problem which confronts every girl at the brink of life. It depicts the rending of the veil. She was young, beautiful, talented. She stood on the threshold of life. And the four great ways of the world lay at her feet. THE WAY OF DUTY—THE WAY OF AMBITION—THE WAY OF WEALTH and THE WAY OF LOVE. Which path shall she take? "Look into the crystal of your own soul," said the Hindu mystic—and she saw.

WITH FINGERS! CORNS LIFT OUT

Costs few cents! Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out, with the fingers. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Advertisement.

OUCH! PAIN! RUB OUT RHEUMATISM

Stop suffering! Relief comes the moment you apply old "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Rheumatism is "pain only."

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub the misery right away! Apply soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It is harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

Limber up! Stop complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment" at any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness and stiffness. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. "St. Jacobs Liniment" is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.—Advertisement.

"TIZ"—A JOY TO SORE, TIRED FEET

Use "Tiz" for aching, burning, puffed-up feet and corns or callouses.

Good-bye, sore feet, burning feet, swollen feet, tender feet, tired feet.

Good-bye, corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "Tiz" is magical, acts right off. "Tiz" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. Use "Tiz" and wear smaller shoes. Use "Tiz" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" now at any druggist or department store. Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. A year's foot comfort guaranteed or money refunded.—Advertisement.

WOMEN URGED TO HELP WAR BONUS FIGHT

Mrs. Flora Chapin Declares All Owe a Duty to Men Who Won War

deserves the thanks of the people for launching such a petition, which is worthy of the support of all.

"Many soldiers have told me that they would so much appreciate the six months' pay, but they felt that others should take the initiative in obtaining it. I am sure that the mothers and wives of the men are grateful to the American for its effort in behalf of the soldiers."

Mrs. Chapin, as head of the relief corps of the State, is practically the spokesman for thousands of its members. Copies of the petition which is surpassing in popularity anything that has ever been submitted to the people of this State are already in many corps headquarters and receiving the signatures of hundreds of members.

WIVES OF VETERANS KNOW.

The wives of Grand Army members, who for the most part make up the auxiliary, know what suffering their husbands passed through when they came home from the war penniless and without work, and they are heartily supporting the proposal to give the heroes of the last war the recognition from the government that is due them.

That many of the returned soldiers, sailors and marines face conditions not unlike those that confronted the men of the Grand Army upon their return from the Civil War is apparent from the reports that are daily coming to the attention of the Soldiers' Friend, and to co-operating agencies which are seeking to place the discharged service men in positions offering suitable remuneration.

It would be easy to place 300 men a day in occupations, if the occupations were available, say many of the workers. Only a small percentage of the men who went to fight for their country in the fine glow of patriotism and were assured by their employers that their jobs would be awaiting them upon their return, have got their jobs back.

HAVE LITTLE MONEY.

The employers say that the unsettled condition of things following peace makes it impossible to take back their former employes until there is some adjustment of industry to a peace basis.

Many of these young men have not more than $10 or $15 to tide them over until they can find work. Meanwhile they are buoyed up by promises that they will be given work in a short time.

The heads of one employment bureau declare that they have 1,000 service men on their list of applicants for work and that they have been able to place only one-tenth of the number in any kind of jobs.

The families of many soldiers, sailors and marines are suffering also through delayed allotments. One soldier said his family had not received a penny from the government for seventeen months and that all communications to the War Risk Insurance Bureau at Washington were unanswered.

WHERE TO GET INFORMATION.

The Soldiers' Friend legal department has its hands full looking after allotments and legal questions involved in insurance. These questions can be answered by mail or in person by calling at Room No. 926, at No. 1 Beacon street.

Hundreds of queries are pouring in daily concerning the location of units and their probable return to this country. In order to catch up with the queries that are arriving by the hundreds with each day's mail, several columns of answers will be published sometime this week. If your question has not yet been answered look for it in this column. It is sure to appear.

Soldiers, sailors or marines troubled about any questions connected with the service, or with their return to civil life will have them as promptly answered as possible by writing to the Soldiers' Friend at the Boston American, No. 80 Summer street.

Soldiers' Friend

Readers of the Boston American are following with daily growing interest the answers of the Soldiers' Friend to queries of every nature relative to men in the service and their affairs.

Address all communications to the Soldiers' Friend, Boston American, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

A SOLDIER'S MOTHER—Company A, 11th Engineers, is with the army of occupation.

LIONEL F.—Battery A, 11th F. A., is with the army of occupation in Germany.

CONSTANT READER, EAST BOSTON—Battery C, 8th F. A., has not been assigned for early convoy.

SISTER OF TWO—Company M, 57th Pioneer Infantry, is with the army of occupation and not assigned for an early return.

ANXIOUS MOTHER, RANDOLPH—The 312th Supply Company is with the 87th Division, at St. Nazaire, and not assigned for early convoy.

How Soldiers' Friend Will Help Heroes of War

The purposes of the Soldiers' Friend follow:

1—To conduct a legal bureau, with headquarters in Washington and with branches in each city where a Hearst paper is published.

2—To have the severe sentences of courts-martial examined into to see if any injustice has been done and to fight for the righting of all wrongs that may have been done by courts-martial.

3—To aid discharged soldiers in securing positions.

4—To List employers ready to hire discharged men.

5—To gain special medical attention for recently discharged men.

6—To work for the rapid discharge of soldiers, with six months' pay in advance.

7—To help relatives find men in the service.

8—To hurry the settlement of allotments and pay where delays have occurred.

9—To provide information consistent with the nature of this department.

10—To aid in the formation of associations of veterans of the great war; to list those formed and to assist them in working out their plans.

11—To arrange lodgings for visiting service men.

12—To give legal and seek personal aid where soldiers' families are threatened with dispossess proceedings.

Mrs. Flora Chapin Indorses Petition for 6 Months' Pay

It is the duty of citizens to sign this petition, and the Boston American deserves the thanks of the people for launching this petition, which is worthy of the support of all. Many soldiers have told me that they would appreciate the six months' pay, but they felt that others should take the initiative in obtaining it. I am sure that the mothers and wives of the men are grateful to the American for its'efforts in behalf of the soldiers—From statement of Mrs. Flora Chapin of Worcester, State President of the Women's Relief Corps.

WIDOW OF TEN DAYS DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Milford, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Lena (Kenney) Nagle, a widow of only 10 days, died of pneumonia at her home on Winter street, aged 25 years. Her late husband, James Nagle, died of influenza in a Boston hospital, where he went for an operation for appendicitis. She leaves two children, two brothers and two sisters. She is a member of St. Mary's Alumni Association.

ASK MALDEN WAR CHEST TO AID MEN IN SERVICE

To provide the Malden men discharged from the 301st Infantry with funds until they shall find jobs, residents of Malden have sent a petition to the Malden War Chest asking that funds be taken from that account for the purpose. It is said that some of the boys have jobs waiting for them, but have not sufficient money to buy civilian clothes to take the positions.

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of Danderine at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.—Advertisement.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company.—Advertisement.

MELROSE URGES 6 MONTHS' PAY FOR DISCHARGED MEN

Melrose city government has passed a resolution asking that the Mayor on behalf of the city, communicate at once with the Congressmen and Senators in Washington from Massachusetts, urging them to favor legislation which shall grant to all men honorably discharged from service, six months' pay from the time of discharge.

The city has also authorized the appointment of a special committee of citizens to be named by the Mayor, to aid soldiers in securing employment.

WORCESTER TEACHERS FOR NATIONAL UNION

Worcester, Jan. 22.—Public school teachers of Worcester are interested in a plan for the unionizing of all teachers in America. A movement toward this end is progressing and it is believed that many teachers of Massachusetts will join the organization.

The proposed union, planned for the bettering of school room conditions and a maximum salary of $1,000 a year, will include teachers from elementary grades to college professors.

HARRIS TRIAL AT CAMP DEVENS IS ENDED

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Jan. 22—Trial of Captain Harry J. Harris, commander of the salvage company, Quartermaster Corps, ended today when opposing counsel submitted statements. He is charged with misappropriating government property for personal use. His home is at No. 58 University road, Brookline. It may be several weeks before the findings of the court-martial board will be made known.

Private Alfred [illegible], Headquarters [illegible] Infantry, whose home is at No. [illegible] street, Charlestown, was sentenced to two years at Fort Jay, N. Y., for desertion.

Fifteen salvage overseas men who returned to Boston from France on the transport Mobile arrived in this cantonment today and were assigned quarters in the depot brigade. The men were listed in camp casualty companies. Their clothing was sent to a sanitary plant to be cleaned.

Abraham Rosenstein, for thirteen months a secretary at the Jewish Welfare Board, today left for New York and will leave there for France to work among the soldiers of Jewish extraction.

By order of the War Department, 361 men of the Plymouth Division, drafted for service by local boards in Iowa, left today for Camp Dodge, that State, to be mustered out. A lot of 571 enlisted men was sent to Camp Taylor, Ky., to be discharged.

Services for Soldier

The funeral of [illegible] Simonds Currier of Arlington Heights, who had been in service as a member of Company C, 1st Battalion, United States Guard, for about fifteen months, was held today at his late home, No. 8 Wollaston avenue.

MRS. BEULAH W. PATRAW, who was Miss Mays before her marriage. She was chief clerk in the office of the surgeon-general.

The Strong Withstand The Winter Cold Better Than The Weak.

Old people who are feeble and younger people who are weak, will be strengthened and enabled to get through the cold weather by taking GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC, which is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in syrup. So pleasant even children like it. You can soon feel its Strengthening, Invigorating Effect. Price 60c.—Advt.

WAR ROMANCE OF EDWARDS' SECRETARY

Doing their bit 3,000 miles apart Miss Beulah W. Mays of Richmond, Va., and Francis P. Patraw, secretary to General Clarence R. Edwards, waited for the war to end before wedding. Miss Mays was chief clerk in the office of the surgeon-general at Washington, D. C.

Now they are married, although Mrs. Patraw is still in her old position, and Mr. Patraw still with General Edwards at Northeastern headquarters, No. 99 Chauncy street. He went to France with General Edwards and returned with him. When they returned to this country and the armistice was signed, the lovers decided not to wait any longer to be married; but both are going to "stand by" Uncle Sam as long as their services are required.

Funeral of Mrs. Mahr

The funeral of Mrs. Ella Bruch Mahr of Arlington Heights, member of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, was held today from her late home at No. 21 Elmore street, with the Rev. Charles Taber Hall, rector of the St. John's Episcopal Church, Arlington, officiating. Burial was at Mount Auburn.

HENRY D. YERXA OF CAMBRIDGE IS DEAD

Henry P. Yerxa, president of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company, is dead at his home, No. 37 Lancaster street, Cambridge. Mr. Yerxa was one of the founders of the Cambridge park system and had been president of the Cambridge Park Commission.

He was born in York County, New Brunswick, Canada, in 1847, and came to Boston when nineteen years old. He became a partner in the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company when only twenty-three years old.

Mr. Yerxa was several times elected to the Governor's Council, serving under Governors Crane and Bates, and acted as president of the Charles River Basin Commission when that commission was most active. His connection with the park problem began when Mayor Alger of Cambridge appointed him one of five citizens to prepare a plan for the city.

Mr. Yerxa was director of the Beacon Trust Company, trustee of the Cambridge Hospital and an active member of the North Avenue Baptist Church.

He is survived by a son, Herbert E. Yerxa, treasurer of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company, and by three daughters, Miss Sarah E. Yerxa, Mrs. William S. Youngman and Mrs. Theodore O. Barnard.

HARRY W. DUDLEY LEFT ESTATE OF $55,000

The will of Harry W. Dudley of Somerville, who died September 24, 1918, has been allowed. Mrs. Elizabeth W. Dudley, his widow, has been appointed as executrix and has given a bond of $70,000. The estate is valued at $55,000.

300,000 HEBREWS JOIN THE NEW LABOR PARTY

New York, Jan. 22—The new American Labor Party today has an adherent in the United Hebrew Trades, representing 300,000 workers, and an avowed opponent in the Socialist party.

THREE GUGGENHEIMS QUIT REFINING OFFICES

New York, Jan. 22—Retirement of three of the elder Guggenheims as officers of the American Smelting & Refining Company and the American Smelters Securities Company has been announced here. Daniel Guggenheim withdraws as president of the two companies and is succeeded by Simon Guggenheim, who also takes over the chairmanship of the finance committee of the companies, until now held by Murry Guggenheim, and chairmanship of the executive committees, until now held by S. R. Guggenheim.

Flyer Press Club Guest

Major Cushman A. Rice, United States air service, who brought the first twenty American aero squadrons abroad for service at the front, is to be a guest at the Boston Press Club at lunch today. He will tell of his experiences flying over Germany.

PIANO SALE

Save $100

I WENT into the piano business to make money by saving people money—not from purely philanthropic motives, but because of the Co-operative value of the "Money Saving" idea—and believing that if the idea were projected into its possibilities it would eventually establish a business relation between my customers and my business that would be 100% mutuality. Upon that money saving idea I have since built up the largest business of its kind in the world.

I am conducting the piano business with the greatest regard for the people's side of the transaction—I know that every family will appreciate any saving that I may make for it in the buying of the piano and I use my business ability and my money to make that saving as big as possible.

I am in close touch with the piano situation throughout America, every piano manufacturer in the country knows that I can pay spot cash for his pianos if he makes the price low enough for me to save a good sum for my customers—and there comes a time when these manufacturers need cash and they come to me for it. I never buy anything but the best pianos and only at a price that permits me to make a substantial saving for my customers.

JOHNNY McGRAW TO APPEAR AT TRIAL OF HAL CHASE

By NICK FLATLEY.

SPEAKING of fights, there's another big one slated for the well-known National League ring over in New York January 30. Hal Chase, the first baseman suspended by the Reds last Fall, fights to stay in big league ball. It is claimed that Hal bet against his own team, and did a whole lot of other things not according to Hoyle, or Chadwick, or any of the authorities.

Hal insists that he is innocent, and will fight the thing to a finish. He had the trial postponed a week, so as to be in better trim for his defense, which seems as logical as a lot of other things, Hal only having had since last August to get his evidence together.

Ban Johnson, the still czar of baseball, says that Chase will not play this year, and what Ban says generally goes. President Heydler of the National League, however, announces that the athlete will be given every chance in the world to clear himself. If Hal can do this, there's the prospect of a battle with the American League, and probably another defeat.

It is announced that Manager-Owner McGraw of the Giants, and Pol Perritt of the same team, will be called as witnesses. For which side is not announced, but the testimony should be interesting. The Giant director is after Chase for his team, and, consequently, cannot but hope that one of the greatest players the pastime has known, whatever else his faults, will be exonerated.

The real evidence in the Chase matter has never been handed out to a palpitating universe, and Christy Mathewson, who preferred the charges, is still overseas.

Amateurs on Again at Unicorn Club.

THOSE watch-collecting youths, who will be the professional comers a year hence, are having the busiest season of their hectic lives. The latest tournament to be announced will be staged by the B. A. A. at its clubhouse, Saturday night, February 8. There will be open bouts in the 108, 125, 135 and 145-pound classes. This makes at least half a dozen opportunities the ring beginners have ahead of them within a month or so. The ball starts a-rolling tonight with the St. Joseph's T. A. S. show.

Three special members, as well as the regulation class melees, will feature the program, which will be put through at the quarters of the Commercial A. C.

Bogie of Fed Suit Caused S. L. Change.

PERHAPS it may not be so, but we have an idea that the famous salary limit of the equally famous National League, was tossed into the discard, not so much because of the universal protest it aroused, as because of that suit which has been brought against organized B. B. by the dear old Federal League.

A hearing on the suit is listed for some time in the near future. Had a salary limit been enforced as a league rule, the law sharks of the defunct outlaw league might have claimed, and with much truth it would seem, that organized baseball was a monopoly.

Rambling Remarks About the Rambling Boxers.

JUST to satisfy our New Bedford correspondent, who insists that Al Shubert is the best of the featherweights, we asked Chick Hayes of the Radio School what he thought about it. Chick responded that he could beat Al any old time, and was anxious to do so. So there, perhaps, our N. B. corr. has a chance to start something. In advance we might inform the managers that positively not more than one letter of challenge and defiance and scorn of the rival—one from each end—will be tolerated.

Calls to mind that Al Delmont has renamed Chick Miller "K. O." which original title is bestowed because said boxer stiffened three opponents last week. According to Al, he's anxious to perform similarly each week.

BINGHAM AND LUDECKER PLAN A ROUGH PARTY

"Everything goes" is the agreement between Will Bingham, American jiu jitsu champion, and Martin Ludecker in their match at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night. This means that all the tricks of the bone-breaking Japanese sport will be permitted and the referee will remain off the canvas until one of the men signal their defeat.

The catch-as-catch-can section will have "Donnybrook" Patsy McCarthy paired with John Carlson, one fall to win, and James Conrad meeting Billy Elias.

SACCO GAINS VERDICT OVER CURRIE AT SALEM

The new Salem A. C. got away to a fine start, offering the fans of the Witch City four interesting bouts as an opening attraction. In the final Young Sacco defeated Joe Currie of New Haven, in ten fast rounds. Chick West, claimant of the New England welter title, romped home an easy winner over Young Brusso in a go of similar length. The scraps were held in Now and Then Hall. The club will conduct weekly shows.

BOXING BANNED IN PARIS BY POLICE HEAD

Paris, Jan. 22.—The prefect of police has refused to grant permission to a syndicate of promoters to revive boxing in Paris.

Since the war boxing exhibitions have been taboo, the only bouts held having been under the auspices of the National Sporting Club of Paris and for members only.

Several directors of the club were interested in the project to begin public prize fights, and the action of Prefect Raux came somewhat as a surprise.

He characterized the application for permission to hold bouts as "premature" and dismissed it without holding forth any promise for boxing in the future.

One of the first bouts planned, it is said, was to have been between Georges Carpentier and an American or English heavy from one of the armies.

Carpentier, who has been missing from his old haunts at the Chatham bar and the Casino de Paris for many months, has practically been in training, it is said. He may go to the United States in the Spring. It is now believed, but will insist on appearing in ten-round bouts only.

TOLL PROVES POLOISTS DID BIT FOR UNCLE SAM

There will not be any international polo contests, not even the national championships, this year, the Polo Association decided at its annual meeting in New York. H. R. Herbert was elected chairman; W. A. Hazard, secretary-treasurer and the committee members were re-elected. Of the 1,140 members of the association, 1,005 went into the service. Six are major-generals and six brigadier-generals.

RUTH FAILS TO GET HIS PRICE; MAY 'JUMP'

Battering Babe Ruth, crack pitcher, first baseman and outfielder and demon hitter, likewise the Red Sox' "ace" has informed President Harry H. Frazee what he wants for his '19 stipend.

In Babe's opinion he can establish at least fourteen most excellent points why he should get what he wants this year; in fact, the "ace" fails to see why he isn't entitled to practically as much as Ty Cobb.

The Peach draws some [illegible], it is pretty well understood. Babe is after something like half of that figure, his friends say.

Heretofore Ruth has been quick to sign. What's more, he has never pulled down a particularly gaudy pay envelope. But Babe swears by all that's holy he will get "mine"—meaning "his'n"—this year.

Friends of Ruth declare Babe is a holdout in the full meaning of the word, and if Frazee doesn't meet his figure, the big fellow will join J. Franklin Baker at Upland, Pa.

Frazee, now in Boston on a brief trip, states he intends being fair with Ruth, as well as with all his other players. But he declares he won't be "held up," and this Ruth et al. want to appreciate.

Former Manager Jack Barry did not call on Frazee yesterday, as was expected. However, [illegible] for the conference today. With Janvrin disposed of to Clark Griffith, Barry will be needed by the Sox in the coming grind.

The rumor that Duffy Lewis was going into the auto business out on the Coast is punctured by the Alameda Kid. He has just written Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, stating he is pleased over the swap that puts him in New York and is ready to talk terms.

Jack Coombs has pulled off his first swap. The Phils get Infielders Baird and Stewart and Pitcher Gene Packard from the Cards and pass along Milton Stock, that corking good little third baseman, and Pickles Dillhoefer and Dixie Davis, a broiler battery.

NO TRIP SOUTH IN SPRING FOR HARVARD NINE

Harvard's baseball invasion of the South the coming Spring will have to be abandoned this year unless the faculty grants the nine a week's lay-off in April, which is highly improbable and may not even be requested.

Harvard's Spring recess was set by the government when it took over the university last September. While that contract has been cancelled, the college authorities have decided to stick to the War Department's curriculum until next Autumn.

The national Spring recess starts March 21 and continues one week. Normally these holidays commence in mid-April, and not only give the nine, but the tennis and lacrosse teams as well, an opportunity to invade the South.

With a bleak March recess such an undertaking becomes practically an impossibility.

Harvard 1922 vs. St. Mark's

Last Hands Are Played in Poker Story Contest

The poker contest, which winds up today, brings the American's series of prize sporting stories to a close. The series was an unqualified success; a lot of snappy sporting yarns were turned lose by readers of the American. Watch for the winners Saturday. Here's a few of the last "hands" in the contest:

A. F. TYMON, No. 7 Blake street,

At a five-handed game in Salem was one player known as a hard loser. Once, when he left the room, the deck was "fixed," and when he returned a phony cut and deal was pulled off.

He was dealt four kings and a jack, with three aces and two odd cards going to the next man. The hard loser opened and was immediately raised. Two of the others stayed to make things look right. The opener raised back and was in turn raised, with one of the others staying.

The deck was fixed so that after the hands were dealt the ace of hearts was second from the top, to provide in case the opener drew one, which he did. The next man drew two and, of course, caught his fourth ace.

The opener bet and the man with four aces said, "If I had another queen I'd bet with you."

"All right," said the opener; "give Bill another queen." This was done, and then the fun started. When the opener got to the end of his roll and had to call, Bill laid down his four "bullets."

The opener jumped up and yelled: "Say, what in h— did you want with a queen?"

LOUIS J. BELLONIO, No. 85 London street, East Boston:

In a friendly game between young fellows, they all agreed in advance that when anyone got broke he could take enough out of the last pot he played in for carfare.

Finally one of them got broke and he took all the money there was in the pot, $3.60. The fellow with the best hand wanted to know why he took all the money.

"Didn't we agree before the game that when anyone got broke he could take enough out of the last pot for carfare?" he asked.

"Yes," came the reply.

"Well, then, someone owes me more money. I live in New York."

CHARLES K. JOHNSON, No. 21 Traction street, Manchester, N. H.:

A farmer was playing in a small game. Frequently he would bet on a small pair of fives, and although he had been told time and time again about this, he would continue to do it.

P. opened a pot with a pair of aces. The farmer was asked if he would stay and replied, "Sure, I'm game if the rest are." Everybody stayed.

P. started the betting, R. and D. dropping out. The farmer then remarked, "By gosh, I'll raise yer."

P., who had picked up his hand without looking at it, discovered he had thrown away his aces by mistake and had a worthless hand. With disgust he threw down his cards.

The farmer then was asked what he had and produced a hand containing a pair of sixes! He then remarked, "Gosh! I thought they were nines."

E. L. GRIMES, No. 60 Kirkland street, Cambridge:

It happened down in Dallas, Tex., and five cotton buyers were engaged in a game of draw. Each was supposed to be honest, so it was decided to make it Honest John.

One fellow, apparently having a great streak of luck, held four aces continually. Along about 2 a. m. there was a sensational pot. The fellow who had held four aces so often was raised and raised several times.

Finally the bet was called, and being asked what he had, he replied "four aces."

The other fellow in the pot said, "They aint worth a—; I have five."

According to the rules of Honest John he took the pot, consisting of several hundred bales of cotton.

Leonard Hits Out for Coast and Has Four Encounters Booked

New York, Jan. 22.—Champion Benny Leonard, little the worse for his encounter with Johnny Dundee over in Newark Monday night, pulled out today for the coast.

Benny's first venture will be in San Francisco, where he will take on Joe Benjamin, one of the rising hopes of that section.

Following a second bout in Frisco, Benny will start back East, stopping off at St. Louis and Hot Springs, Ark., for engagements.

THIS is the anniversary of the birth in 1561 of the famous Francis Bacon, whose essays have made his name one of the foremost in English literature. He was one of the most learned men of the golden age of English letters, and his style is still regarded as a model for clearness, logic and conciseness.

Numbers on Streets

FOUR hundred years ago the idea of numbering houses originated in Paris, though it was not until 1789 that the system became general. The first known instance of a London street in which houses were numbered is Prescott street, but the practice did not spread until 1764.

THE SECRET LIFE AND LOVES OF THE EX-CZARINA

As Told by the Baroness Zeneide Tzankoff, Her Lifelong Confidante

Sensational Chapters in the Amazing Career of the Deposed Empress of the Russians

Girlhood Flirtations and Her Plotting on the Throne Which Led to the Wreck of the Empire

Edited by William Le Queux.

(Copyright, 1919, by William Le Queux. Book, Cinema and Translation Rights are reserved.)

The first instalment of this baring of the secret life of the former Czarina appeared in Monday's American. In it the Baroness Tzankoff tells who she is and her school life with Alix, the future ill-fated empress. She also writes of the suicide in London of a "Charles Dent" and how the former Czarina quickly assumed all the expenses of a costly funeral. In yesterday's paper is told the meeting with Rudolf Weissdorf and the beginning of that love affair.

PART II.—Continued

QUICKLY explained the reason that my "sister" could not meet him, whereupon, after expressing deep regret, he pressed me to stay and have dinner with him. I, nothing loth, accepted his invitation. We dined together at a bright and popular little place called the Casino, in the Nekarstrasse, and afterwards, as we strolled together, he became inquisitive as to where we lived—as was but natural.

"Your sister will tell me nothing," he said with an air of dissatisfaction, "except that your father is director of the orchestra at the Hof Theatre. But I find that the director is Herr Klose."

"Oh, yes," I answered quickly. "My father resigned recently, as he was appointed musical director of the opera at Cologne. We still remain here at home in Darmstadt for the present. But we are moving to Cologne very soon. It is horribly dull here after Rome."

"And you refuse to reveal where you are living so that I may call upon you and your sister?" the young man begged.

"I regret that I cannot, because I fear that my mother may not approve of what she would call our 'carryings on!'" I laughed. "Forgive us, but for the present it is best to remain as we are."

"Ah! I see you are a very discreet young person, Marie," declared the tall, handsome young man to whom Alix was indebted for rescuing her from injury on the night of the "Befana." "But look here," he added, "cannot you realize how very deeply and devotedly I love your sister? She is all in the world to me. If it were not so, I should certainly not be here in Darmstadt."

"I quite understand, Herr Weissdorf," I replied. "But in certain things it is wise to exercise discretion."

"Now tell me," he urged, halting and placing his hand upon my shoulder in the darkness. "Do you think that your sister has any real affection for me?"

For a moment I hesitated, wondering whether it were wise to deceive him, or tell the truth. I decided upon the latter course.

I Know That She Loves You

"Yes," I said, "I know that she loves you."

"She has no other lover?" he asked with the breathless eagerness of a man filled by a fierce passion of love. "Are you certain of it, Marie?"

I replied in the affirmative.

"Ah! you have taken a great weight from my heart," he declared. "I thank you for it, and confess to you that I love Alix with all my heart and with all my soul! It is my sole object in life that she may become my wife!"

Realizing how truly in earnest the young fellow was, I sighed within myself, well knowing, alas! that between them lay a barrier—the barrier of birth that never could be bridged.

When I managed to leave him and return by a circuitous road to the Palace I went straight to Alix's room and told her all that had transpired.

"Ah! Zeneide," she sighed, "Rudolf is a manly, honest fellow, so vastly different to all these uniformed popinjays at Court. I love him very dearly and I know that he loves me just as firmly!"

"Yes," I said. "But surely this affair has gone far enough? Why not tell him the truth? It is all very foolish, to my mind, and highly dangerous!" I declared.

"I cannot. I have unfortunately gone too far in deceiving him. He believes all I have told him," she said. "If he discovers my identity, then he will probably leave Darmstadt, and regard our acquaintance as a mere romantic incident of his life."

Danger Ahead

I said nothing, yet I foresaw grave danger ahead. I alone knew the extent of his overwhelming and passionate infatuation for her, and I also knew how completely he possessed her heart.

Next day Frau Hertefeld having to go out to dine at the house of Baron Carlo von Riedesel, Chancellor of the Orders, Alix dressed, and, aided by Annette, of course, succeeded in creeping out unnoticed.

Just after ten she returned and was already in her room posing as an invalid when the woman Hertefeld—who, by the way, was our particular ogre—returned to inquire how she felt. When she had gone and we were again alone, Alix, apparently much perturbed, said in a low, serious voice:

"I am very much perturbed, Zeneide! I had no idea that Rudolf loved me so intensely!"

"Have I not told you that the position is dangerous—highly dangerous!" I urged. "Do be careful."

"Ah! You always urge discretion!" she declared. "Am I not discreet?"

"Yes," I said. "But, remember, you in your position of princess cannot conceal your identity."

Next night she was prevented from meeting him, so I went in her place and gave her message. I only remained with him for ten minutes, but on hearing that she could not come he exclaimed in a low voice, with an air of bitter disappointment:

"I had hoped to see Alix tonight, for my father has ordered me to go to England at once on business."

I told her this; therefore, the next night she contrived to meet him, and again upon the next night. So late was it when she returned that I feared lest Frau Hertefeld might learn of her absence.

When she arrived she was pale and much distressed. That they were both passionately enamoured of each other I knew too well—she the daughter of the Grand Duke and related to half the royal families of Europe, and he a mere commercial traveller.

I Shall Not See Rudolf Again!

"Rudolf is leaving tomorrow," she exclaimed briefly. "I shall not see him again."

"What!" I gasped. "You have ended it?"

She nodded in the affirmative, and, bursting into blinding tears, left me.

On the following morning about 11 o'clock we were both leaving the Palace with Frau Hertefeld for our morning walk, and had scarcely descended the long flight of steps and passed the sentries at the gate, when, to our amazement, the young man Weissdorf, pale and haggard, stood in Alix's path. Regardless of Frau Hertefeld, he cried hoarsely and in a wild manner:

"Ah! I have at last found you out! You have deceived me! You are the Princess Alix!"

"And who is this man, pray?" asked Frau Hertefeld.

Meanwhile the young fellow had spoken some quick, eager words to the Princess—words which seemed to stun her. Then, laughing wildly, he bowed low to us and, turning, went away, with words of bitter farewell upon his lips.

Alix stood for another second looking at his retreating figure, and then I knew that, had we been alone, she would have dashed after him to beg his forgiveness.

"Who was that man?" asked Frau Hertefeld with an irritated air.

But the Princess merely shrugged her shoulders and answered:

"Oh! some silly lunatic, I suppose," and she walked forward as one in a dream.

What I had dreaded had occurred. Rudolf Weissdorf had, on learning her identity, realized that the iron-bound law of caste debarred him from the realization of her hopes, and, further, he believed that she had deliberately fooled him.

Days Full of Wild Expectancy

The next days were full of wild expectancy. Would he write? A dozen times each day she breathlessly asked my opinion, while Frau Hertefeld made several inquiries of me regarding the young stranger's identity. But, of course, I revealed nothing.

At last, a week later, a letter came, bearing the London postmark. Of its contents I learned nothing. All I know is that she at once sent Annette to the post-office with a hasty telegram in reply.

That evening the Kaiser arrived from Berlin, in order to review the troops on the Exerzier-Platz next day; therefore she was compelled to hide her grief and present herself with a brave face to the brilliant throng assembled.

Two days later came a further letter from Rudolf, also posted in London, and again she telegraphed a reply, and also posted him a long letter that same evening. But she was too unnerved to attend the banquet given in the Emperor's honor.

Three days later came a telegram, of the actual contents of which I am also in ignorance; but on its receipt she went frantic with grief.

Rudolf, My Darling, Is Dead!

Then came a blank. To two urgent telegrams she dispatched to England she received no reply.

One night I went to her room and was alarmed to find that she had flung herself upon her bed and was sobbing bitterly.

In reply to my anxious inquiries, as I dropped upon my knees beside her, she cried in a hoarse, grief-stricken voice:

"Rudolf, my darling Rudolf! He is dead!"

And with her face buried in the pillow she pointed to an open letter which, as I afterwards knew, was the one which the young man who had called himself "Charles Dent" had penned immediately before taking his life, and which had been sent, sealed, through diplomatic channels, to Alix's father, the Grand Duke, who, after reading it, had called her and coldly handed it to her without a single word of comment, except to say:

"Alix, this, I believe, is intended for you!"

As I have already explained, certain of the London newspapers reported the romantic affair of which I here lay bare the truth for the first time—the first tragedy of many in the life of the hapless Princess who afterwards became Czarina of Russia, and whose secret life it is my intention to disclose.

PART III.

TRULY the life of the ex-Empress of Russia has been full of exciting episodes and strange scandals.

For a full year after the tragic death of Rudolf Weissdorf, Alix, brooding in silence over her grief, took but little interest in anything. Her life in her home circle was not a happy one, and, though we made visits to several of the German courts, an intolerable dulness was the chief characteristic of our existence.

Alix's father, the Grand Duke Louis, died early in the following March, after which she practically kept house for her brother, the present Grand Duke. Soon, however, the latter married, and, though his consort was her cousin, the daughter of the Duke of Coburg, Alix could not get on with her at all.

Things went from bad to worse. There were eternal bickerings in the Grand Ducal household, in which I often found myself implicated, while Frau Hertefeld became increasingly unpleasant towards both of us.

Dreary Days

The gay days spent with Louisa of Tuscany had been succeeded by gray, hopeless weeks and months in that dreary schloss at Darmstadt, where we had few visitors, and even the usual court functions had become quite funeral affairs.

Alix had been dazed and stunned by the tragedy of the English lakeside, which, however, had been successfully concealed from the world. All the circumstances, indeed, seemed to have given an element of bitterness to a somewhat haughty temper. Hers was a curiously complex nature. Motherless while still a little child, no elements of softness had been introduced into her strict upbringing. She had never been taught to be gracious or amiable, while the unsettled life she had led had acted adversely upon her character.

Indeed, the peculiarities which she developed in after-life can easily be traced to the lack of control in her early training.

We had been guests of the Kaiser at the Neues Palais for a fortnight in the Autumn, and it was, indeed, a welcome change. The Emperor was always particularly gracious towards Alix, and on that occasion we both enjoyed ourselves, for among our fellow guests were several nice eligible young men. The gaiety of Berlin was, indeed, welcome after the eternal quarrels at Darmstadt; but at last came the termination of our visit, and together with the Grand Duke, we returned to Hesse.

Some dreary, uneventful months went past, and life had again become well-nigh unbearable. One day Alix, yearning for gaiety and excitement, received from her sister Elizabeth, who was wife of the Grand Duke Serge Alexandrovitch of Russia, an invitation to St. Petersburg, as it was then called.

Their First Visit to Russia

She went, and I accompanied her. That was my first visit to Russia since I was quite a child, and it was Winter, and the season was at its height.

On arrival at the Grand Duke's palace, the Princess' sister welcomed us warmly, and said:

"I had no idea that you were so lonely in Darmstadt, my dear Alix! The Emperor William wrote to me telling me so, and I at once telegraphed to you to come. You will, of course, stay till the end of the season."

This we did, and a very merry time we both experienced.

Quickly we found ourselves in that vortex of brilliant gaiety which in the days of Alexander III. was so characteristic of the Russian capital in Winter, and, indeed, three nights after our arrival Alix was invited to a court ball at the Winter Palace, whither I went in attendance.

The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome, exhaustive—then, too, it might be harmful to force the weight down. That was the old-fashioned idea. Today in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. Just a pleasant, harmless little tablet after each meal and at bedtime causes fat to vanish. This modern method is absolutely harmless, entails no dieting or exercise, and has the added advantage of cheapness. A large case of safe Marmola Prescription Tablets is sold by druggists at 75c. Or, if preferable, can be obtained by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 84 Garfield Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of any bad after-effects whatever.

The Man Who Lost Himself

By H. DE VERE STACPOOLE

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued.

KELLERMAN was leaning back in his chair with eyes half closed; he seemed calculating something in his head.

"D' you believe me?"

Kellerman opened his eyes.

"Of course I believe you. If you had invented all that you would be clever enough to know what your invention is worth and not hand it out to a stranger. But I doubt whether anyone else will believe you—however, that is your affair—you have given me five reels of the finest stuff, or at least the material for it and if I ever care to use it I will fix up a contract giving you 50 per cent royalties. But there's one thing you haven't given me—the denouement. I'm more than interested in that. I'm not thinking of money. I'm a film actor at heart and I want to help in the play. Say, may I help?"

"How?"

"Come along with you to the end. Give all the assistance in my power—or [illegible] just watch the show. I want to see the last act for I'm blessed if I can imagine it."

"I'd rather not," said Jones. "You might get to know the real names of the people I'm dealing with and as there is a woman in the business I don't feel I ought to give her name away even to you. No. I reckon I'll pull through alone, but if you'd give me a sofa to sleep on tonight I'd be grateful. Then I can get away in the morning."

Kellerman did not press the point.

"I'll give you better than a sofa," he said. "There's a spare bed and you'd better not start in the morning; give them time to cool down. Then towards evening you can make a dash. The servants here are all right, they'll think you are a friend run down from town to see me. I'll arrange all that."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Pebblemarsh

AT five o'clock next day, Jones, re-dressed by Kellerman in a morning coat rather the worse for wear—a coat that had been left behind at the bungalow by one of Kellerman's friends—and a dark cloth cap, took his departure from the bungalow. His appearance was frankly abominable, but quite distinct from the appearance of a man dressed in a gray flannel tennis coat and wearing a Panama—and that was the main point.

Kellerman had also worked up a history and personality for the newly attired one.

"You are Mr. Isaacson," said he. "Here's the card of Mr. Isaacson who called some time ago, put it in your pocket. I will write you a couple of fake letters to back the card; you are in the watch trade. Pebblemarsh is the nearest town, only five miles down the road; there's a station there, but you'd better avoid that. There's a garage. You could get a car to London. If they nail you, scream like an excited Jew, produce your credentials and if the worst comes to the worst refer to me and come back here. I would love that interview: Country policeman, lunatic asylum man, Mr. Isaacson highly excited, and myself."

He sat down to write the fake letters addressed to Mr. Isaacson by his uncle, Julius Goldberg, and his partner, Marcus Cohen. As he wrote he talked over his shoulder on the subject of disguises, alleging that the only really impenetrable disguise was that of a nigger minstrel.

"You see, all black faces are pretty much the same," said he. "Their predominant expression is black, but I haven't got the fixings nor the colored pants and things, to say nothing of a banjo, so I reckon you'll just have to be Mr. Isaacson, and you may think the God of the Hebrews I haven't made you an old clothes man—Isaacsons are respectable. Here are your letters; they are short but [illegible]. Have you enough

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated, every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Advertisement.

A HOME MADE GRAY HAIR REMEDY

You Can Make at Home a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary. You can darken it without using a dye.

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It is not a dye, it does not color the most delicate scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Here is a story concerning Sir Arthur Pinero:—

It appears that he was on the point of rehearsing a new play, the rehearsal being timed to begin at 11 o'clock.

Looking around at the assembled company, he noticed that one lady was absent.

"Where is Miss Blank?" asked Sir Arthur, sharply, of his stage manager.

"She has permission to come at 11:30," was the reply, "as she is washing her head."

"Nonsense," growled Sir Arthur, in pretended anger, as he took off his hat, displaying his bald head. "Why, I wash my head every morning, yet I'm never late for rehearsals."

* * *

The Italian Premier, Signor Orlando, has a brother at the Aviation School at Venice. The Premier visited him one day, taking a lady with him.

"My brother," said Signor Orlando, "enthusiastically explained everything to us, and asked the young lady if she understood it all.

"'Yes,' she replied, 'all but one thing.'

"'What's that?'

"'What makes the aeroplanes stay up?'"

HEALTHY BOWELS

Nine-tenths of human sickness, from infancy to old age, comes from stomach or bowels being out of order.

Headaches, tired feeling, nervous depression, weakness, spots before the eyes, bad breath, sleeplessness, irritability, dizziness and many other signs of sickness stop if you treat the stomach and bowels right and get them into working order.

The prescription, known as Dr. True's Elixir, has done wonders for sick people, men, women and children, because it is the one remedy that you can rely on to set things right in the stomach and bowels.

Sold by all druggists, big or little, everywhere. Druggists, as a rule, are very honest. They do not try to substitute something else for Dr. True's Elixir, because they know its value. Many druggists use it in their own families.

The Hidden Truth

By Jane McLean

(Novelized from the motion picture play, "The Hidden Truth." Film version copyrighted. Produced by International Film Service Company, Inc., under the personal direction of Julius Steger. The film rights now being released by Select Pictures Corporation.)

THEN she went about collecting her belongings—the imitation leather satchel still reposed in the closet and the simple skirt and equally simple waist hung above it in a dark corner. Even the small hat was there and as the girl lay them out and begain to remove the costly garments she wore she felt in spirit the humiliation that was to be outwardly shown by her clothes.

Mrs. Collins, once she emerged from the girl's room, showed her nervousness by walking repeatedly to the windows and peering out as though she expected her nephew.

It was some time before he appeared, and when he did he looked so careworn and distressed that she felt like throwing her arms about his neck and trying as best she could to plead the cause of the girl she, too, had learned to love.

The meeting between Mrs. Collins and her nephew was one fraught with serious consequences to the girl preparing to leave them forever.

"Oh Charles," cried the agitated woman, "what has happened?" Her nephew did not answer at once, but stood looking at her, his own distress plainly written in his eyes.

He had always taken Mrs. Collins into his confidence, but now he felt he could not tell her the story of his trouble. Not because he did not wish to share the burden with her, but because he knew he would be reflecting on Helen.

When he did speak, his voice sounded like a stranger's. "My dear aunt, there has been a misunderstanding, that's all—the engagement has been broken by mutual consent."

Mrs. Collins, having heard Helen's story, determined to make her nephew tell his. She put her hand on his arm and begged him to sit down.

"I don't want to make you tell me anything, Charles, that you don't wish to tell, but I feel I might help you—surely some one must be at fault, and what is the fault—for the child adores you."

Film Version Copyrighted

"Oh, no; don't delude yourself."

"Charles, you know she does, and it's your fault. You have let her go on making an idol of you, and now you think you can break her love at a moment's notice. You don't know her as I do, that's why I want to know why."

"I'll tell you, Aunt Sarah. Myrtle is not Myrtle at all. She is merely a girl from Nugget City who brought a letter from Myrtle, and she has been deceiving us all this time. She is no more the daughter of my old partner, Tom Stone, than you are."

"Oh, poor girl," sighed Mrs. Collins.

"Poor girl!" echoed her nephew; "that's the way you feel, is it?"

and I beg to say that I am using Mentho-Laxene in many cases with the greatest success.

Am now using it with a case of measles as an expectorant and it is doing splendid work.

You may use my name and address so any one who cares to know about my cases and my use of Mentho-Laxene."

Note: The extract above is from a letter written by Anna King, Liberty, Saguache Co., Colorado, a professional nurse, who has found that there is nothing equal to Mentho-Laxene in the treatment of incipient colds, in coughs, bronchitis, whooping cough, hoarseness, catarrh, etc. Druggists sell it in 2½ oz. bottles, concentrated, and directions tell how to make a full pint of home-made medicine which is laxative, tonic, antiseptic and expectorant. Millions now "swear by it."

Sold by druggists everywhere.

People who have itched and scratched for years get peaceful sleep and rest through the use of Cadum Ointment

Stocks Stronger in Early Afternoon Trading, but the New York Market Is Quiet

STEEL STEADY, BUT BELOW HIGHEST

Bethlehem B Advances More Than Two Points During the Morning

By W. H. ROSS

Financial Editor.

Stocks were still strong in New York around 2 o'clock, although a number showed losses. The market was not as active as it was yesterday and the price range not as wide.

Gains included Bethlehem B 1½ at 57⅝, after selling at 58⅛; U. S. Steel ⅛ at 89⅝, after selling at 90; Crucible, ⅝ at 54; Reading, ½ at 77⅝, after touching 78¼; Southern Pacific, ½ at 98¼, after touching 97½; American Smelting, ¼ at 68½; Baltimore and Ohio, 1½ at 47½, the day's highest having been 48; Texas Co., 1¼ at 189¾; Tobacco Products, 1⅛ at 74¼, and United Cigar Stores, 1⅛ at 112½.

Anaconda was off ⅛ at 57 and other declines included Utah Copper, 2 at 69¼; Baldwin, ¼ at 66¾; Distillers, 1⅛ at 51½; Industrial Alcohol, 1⅝ at 95; Mexican Petroleum, 1½ at 165⅝ and Marine preferred, 1⅛ at 98⅝.

In Boston, trading was on a small scale, and by afternoon many issues were unchanged. American Woolen preferred was up a point at 95 and United Fruit off a point at 159½. United Shoe had declined ⅛ to 44½. Massachusetts Electric preferred was off ¼ at 15½, and Boston Elevated had sagged 2 to 68.

STRONGER AT THE START.

At the opening prices advanced, but gains averaged small. There was a period of hesitation followed by further improvement. The undertone of the market was better. The Baltimore & Ohio dividend helped railroads apparently. American Hide & Leather was a weak issue owing to its recent report showing a considerable decrease in earnings. Selling during the morning was scattered and buying was fairly steady. It was said that the market is oversold and that the short interest is now very large.

WORRIED BY INDUSTRIAL SITUATION.

The industrial situation is causing worry. Charles M. Schwab's prediction of industrial depression was a great bear factor. It is evident that the stock market is now discounting anything untoward about the near future, and that valuation of securities will reach bottom in advance of what is coming in business. As is always the case, the big question is the location of bedrock. It is likely to be away below real values. Some people think recent support given U. S. Steel when it was under great selling pressure was due to absorption by big interests, but others attributed it to covering. The proximity of the Steel Corporation's dividend meeting increases conjecturing as to the reason for the fluctuations of this stock. The Baltimore & Ohio dividend declaration caused some buying of that road's common issue at the opening today.

SEEK TO REPEAL ACT FAVORING ELEVATED

Repeal of Chapter 159 of the Special Acts of 1918 which permits the trustees of the Boston Elevated to raise carfares, fares and otherwise assess the public is sought in a resolution passed by the St. Thomas Catholic Club on motion of former State Senator Francis J. Horgan. The resolution declares that the trustees have by assuming certain debts increased taxation for a ten-year period. Mayor Peters and the City Council are asked to test the constitutionality of the act.

B. & M. Moves Less Freight

The Boston & Maine railroad is moving 20 per cent. less freight than in August and September last, and as it has equipment for present business, it will spend little money, beyond necessary repairs, upon property this year. When war traffic was at its height last Summer it was estimated that from $10,000,000 to $24,000,000 would have to be spent upon the road to make it fit to answer requirements.

Money Market

There has been no appreciable change in the Boston money market, and in New York the call rate is firmer. In the West there is complaint that rates have not relaxed to the extent expected this month. This week is a period of heavy withdrawal of government deposits and banks are not troubled by a plethora of funds. There is little call money available here under 6 per cent., it is reported, although the quotation is 5½ per cent. to 6 per cent. The time rate rules 6 per cent. There is little local demand for commercial paper, which brings 5½ per cent., out-of-town in most instances.

The latest call rate in New York is 4½ per cent., where time money is dull at 5 per cent. to 5¼ per cent., and commercial paper is quoted at the same figures.

Ex-Senator Now President

Simon Guggenheim, former United States Senator from Colorado and present chairman of directors of American Smelting and Refining Company, has been elected president of that company to succeed his brother, Daniel Guggenheim.

Pacific Mills Sales

For the last half of 1918 Pacific Mills sales amounted to $29,179,170, making gross business of $57,041,065 for the whole year. This was 34.4 per cent. gain over 1917, and the 1917 gain over 1916 was 30.6 per cent. Net profits before Federal taxation for 1918 were $6,731,623, compared with $4,475,508 for 1917, or an increase of more than 50 per cent.

Taunton Awards Loan

The city of Taunton, Mass., has sold a $100,000 temporary loan, maturing October 21, 1919, to S. N. Bond & Co., at 4 per cent. plus $1.25 premium.

N. Y. Sub-treasury Loss

New York, Jan. 22.—The sub-treasury lost $314,000 to the banks on Tuesday, reducing the cash net gain since Friday to $1,971,000.

LIVERPOOL CABLES STEADY N. Y. COTTON MARKET

New York, Jan. 22—The cotton market opened irregular today, 20 points higher to 12 points lower. The near months were relatively steady on the favorable Liverpool cables, Wall street and local covering, while the distant positions were easier under liquidation and light Southern selling. Liverpool sold the old crop and foreign trade interest bought the new months. Prices turned steadier at the end of the first quarter of hour on increased coverings.

The opening prices were: January, 25.35; March, 22.90; April, 22.00; May, 22.55; July, 21.75; September, 20.15; October, 20.05.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Corn opened ⅛ to 2c higher. Oats were ⅛ higher. Provisions opened lower. Opening prices were: Corn, February 1.33, March 1.30¼. Oats, February 66¾, March 67½. Pork, May 40.00. Lard, May 22.55.

American Hide Earnings

Net earnings of the American Hide & Leather Company for the last half of 1918, after interest and taxation charges, were $1,312,826, compared with $1,356,349 for the corresponding 1917 six months. The surplus for the second half of 1918 is $[illegible]2,072, compared with $1,111,424.

American Bosch Magneto Corporation

(New York Corporation)

Capital Stock

Capitalization Authorized and Issued

60,000 Shares of Capital Stock (without Par Value)

$1,800,000 Seven Per Cent. Serial Gold Notes Due 1920, 1921, 1922.

The Bosch Magneto Company was originally formed in 1906. A large plant was erected at Springfield, Mass., which was placed in operation in 1912. The entire capital stock and certain patent rights, etc., were seized by A. Mitchell Palmer, the Alien Property Custodian, and were sold by him in December, 1918. The American Bosch Magneto Corporation has been formed under New York laws and has acquired all the property, business and patent rights and other assets of the Bosch Magneto Company.

The net quick assets alone as of September 30, 1918, were $4,367,767—equal to par for the notes and $42.00 a share for the stock. The value of the plant and equipment as certified by the Manufacturers' Appraisal Co. as of September 30, 1918, was $2,363,300. Total net assets were $6,703,526—equal to par for the notes and $81.00 a share for the stock. The plant includes a factory building of re-inforced concrete construction, four stories in height, with a floor space of over five acres. Patent rights are carried at $1.00.

Average annual net earnings for the five and one quarter years ended September 30, 1918, were $970,800, or at the rate of more than seven times annual interest requirements on the notes. These average earnings are equal to over $14 per share for the stock.

The directors will include Arthur T. Murray, George A. MacDonald, Martin E. Kern, Harry C. Dodge, C. H. Dwinnell, Duncan A. Holmes, Philip L. Spalding, Henry N. Sweet.

A majority of stock having been sold, we offer the unsold balance, subject to prior sale, at $65 per share

All legal details have been passed upon by Messrs. Herrick, Smith, Donald and Farley. An audit of the books has been made by Messrs. Ernst & Ernst, Certified Public Accountants, and an appraisal of the plants and properties by the Manufacturers' Appraisal Company.

—At the sea-shore, about three hundred acres with a mile frontage. Sand-beaches safe for bathing, two harbors, the small one an arm of the sea more than a mile long, surrounded by land and as safe for boating as an inland pond. Plenty of sea-food. A good place for farming and taking summer boarders. An ideal place for a vacation school, colony or club, or for those seeking natural beauty or wishing to try experimental farming with exceptionally good conditions for improvements. A thirty-room house on the place, good water. Not far away are the former summer homes of some of Maine's most noted men of the past. Among them were Joseph H. Manley, Gov. Bodwell, Arthur Sewell; and Gen. Chamberlain was interested here. Need any more be said? Address

Workers' Plan for New Party Worthy of Encouragement

The producing classes of the country are advocating the formation of a new party—a new party which will be in favor of true democratic ideals, of real republican institutions, a party whose first consideration will be for America and for the interests of the vast majority of Americans.

This is a splendid plan and should be encouraged, but the party must be broad enough to be successful. It must be able to unite a sufficient number of the various popular elements of the country to constitute a vast majority.

We cannot have merely a workingman's party and win; we cannot have merely a farmer's party and win; we cannot have merely a soldier's party and win.

But we can have a union of the great patriotic, constructive elements of the country, the great elements who did the real work of this war, who made the sacrifices and won the victory while the special interests were profiting out of the war; the men who fought abroad in France and those who were mustered and ready to go; the men who did the great work of supplying the armies abroad and built the American navy and the American merchant marine; the men who grew the foodstuffs and supported the workers and the fighters.

Let us exclude the special class that speculated in the foodstuffs and robbed the workers and the fighters while these patriotic citizens were engaged in the defence of their country.

Let us make this party a party of real patriots, not of pretended patriots, of genuine Americans who have the interest of their country at heart, and not merely the interest of their pocketbooks.

Old parties are divided too much on issues that are dead and gone and controlled too much by the predatory wealth which contributed campaign funds. The old parties are run too much in the interest of one-tenth of the public. A new party which should be conducted in the interests of the great nine-tenths, the useful mass of citizens which makes the country and which the country has come too little to consider, should be formed.

It cannot fail to accomplish great benefits, and in my mind it is absolutely necessary to the preservation of the Republic as a genuine democracy.

The country is drifting rapidly towards an autocracy of wealth and privilege. The powerful are becoming more powerful and more disregardful of the rights of the whole people.

Their attitude is one of defiance and disdain, the characteristic attitude of a crystallizing aristocracy.

If this country is to remain a republic, to remain a democracy, to remain American, there should be a Democratic-Republican-American party, devoted to preserving and promoting American ideals of equity, equality and opportunity for all.

The activities of the party should be limited to restoring the Government completely to the hands of the people. It should not be cumbered with visionary ideas, extreme views and crank nostrums which gratify a few violent leaders and alienate millions of intelligent voters.

It should declare itself for the popular measures which are possible of more or less immediate accomplishment.

Such a party would speedily be the most effective force in America and would accomplish the most important work in the world—making the United States of America safe for democracy.

Such a party would either accomplish this work itself or it would compel the other parties to accomplish it promptly in order to save themselves from extermination. In either case the work would be done, the great and splendid object for which the loyal men of America came together would be achieved for the safety of our country and the welfare of the world.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

THE PROGRESSIVE PLATFORM OF THE UNITED STATES FARMERS

Experience has taught that our distribution of representation in political councils is imperfect.

Our country is divided into geographical units, and our popular representatives are chosen from these geographical units rather than from economic units. The social and industrial elements of the community are to no extent represented in proportion to their population and importance. In fact, it may be said that the only industrial element which is fully represented is big business, and that is disproportionately represented, to the practical exclusion of other fundamentally more important elements.

Until we devise a more just and accurate economic representation, it is wholly desirable that great economic groupings should by representative conferences offer advice to the politically chosen representatives.

It is right that labor should reveal its special interests in the world settlements, and the hands which restrained it while the war was on should now be removed.

It is right that the great basic industry of agriculture, upon whose welfare the feeding of the world depends, should unfold its programs to the world's best thought.

Especially in America, as the Hearst newspapers have often pointed out, the farmers have had too little voice in the councils of state. They have permitted lesser interests to eclipse them, and thus have usually received the leavings of the feast, while smaller and frequently less deserving groups have taken first helpings.

That was a timely code of recommendation which the Farmers' National Conference on Reconstruction adopted recently in Washington.

Suppose we review today its proposals for economic reconstruction in the United States. They embrace:

Government ownership and development of the natural resources of the country.

Government acquisition and operation of the railroad, pipeline and express systems of the country, and government operation of all inland water transportation, to insure a unified system of transportation of passengers and freight as a government service to be rendered at cost, with the elimination of all watered stock.

The prompt enactment of legislation to make the recommendations of the Federal Trade Commission regarding the packing plants the permanent policy of the country.

A policy of demobilization by industries, with opportunity for soldiers in training camps to be taught trades, including agriculture and construction of public improvements, in order of urgency.

Placing agriculture upon a sound business basis through the establishment of a sound method of marketing farm products, extension of personal credit to farmers, reform of the land system, governmental construction of terminal elevators and expanding government action to stabilize prices of agricultural staples.

Payment of the cost of the war by taxation of excess and war profits, incomes and inheritances, and by taxes on unused lands and other resources speculatively held.

Restoration of personal liberty at the close of the war, and general amnesty for all political prisoners.

Establishment of the principle that labor is the first fixed charge upon all industry.

Passage of the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the Constitution for full suffrage for women.

Reorganization of our system of rural education to adapt it to economic and commercial conditions.

Here are ten affirmative items, each progressive, some even radical, yet only three of the ten are tinged with any suggestion of benefit for farmers which other citizens would not equally share.

The three which might be construed as exhibiting a class interest are the one to make the packing plants serve the people impartially, the one outlining policies for the better protection of agriculture, and the one suggesting that rural education be better linked with the needs of rural life. They are all helpful to all the people if we except the profiteers.

What captains of industry, sitting to frame a code of big business demands, would be content with so small a percentage of special advantage or would be one-half so generous in its perceptions of the common needs?

The outlook which the farming industry now takes upon the future of American life is both patriotic and broad-minded; is intent upon the welfare of the whole people rather than the exclusive or preferential welfare of a class, and is ready to support radical reforms when convinced that the ends are just.

These are good reasons why the more active participation of farmers in the councils of legislation and their better organization for that purpose are to be welcomed.

If we are to have an honest public control, strong enough to be effective, over the great common treasures of earth not yet apportioned among the privileged, or if we are to reclaim into such control any of the treasures now vested in private title, or if we are to have a public ownership and management of transportation that shall be competent and broad in its benefits, we shall need, to a far larger degree than we now have, the vigilant co-operation of the rural and city producing classses, the real progressives and at the same time the true conservers of all in our public life and in our social and economic conditions that is worth conserving—of all that makes for the advancement of the whole citizenship through the Jeffersonian principle of the [illegible] for the greatest number.

LET LIKE-THINKING CITIZENS POOL THEIR POLITICAL POWERS

Strikingly parallel with the political demands of the farmers—indeed, for the most part coincident with them—are the items of the new program of organized labor as framed by the Reconstruction Committee of the American Federation of Labor and as emphasized by the American Labor party of New York.

The captains of labor see clearly that the base of our industrial organization must be democratic if political democracy is to live. They wish to make democracy safe AT HOME.

So they declare for the democratic control of public utilities, which means public ownership; for the rights of the people easily to recall judicial decisions nullifying laws springing out of popular needs and demands; for a larger measure of co-operation in commercial processes, and for collective bargaining and joint conferences in the adjustment of grievances which allow to workers a representative voice in the control of industry.

The purposes for which these and their cognate demands—improved facilities for common education, shortening of the hours to ease the strain of toil and to provide leisure for rest and self-improvement, equal pay for equal work, prevention of child labor and of the overstraining of women, graduated taxation of land held out of use, collective aid in home-making and housing, the prompt removal of war-time restraints upon freedom of the press, speech, assembly and association—are advanced, are not selfish, nor do they rest upon a spirit of class discrimination.

They aim, precisely as do the formulated demands of the farmers, at what in a democracy should be the ruling purpose—the greatest good for the greatest number.

Honest students of our past must in candor confess that from this rule we have often departed, and nowhere further than in the ordering of our industrial life.

There have always been captains of industry who have used their vast powers generously, but the nature of industrial control has been autocratic.

Men cannot make political democracy work as it should when all that concerns the sources of their livelihood is run from above by rulers whom they have had no voice in choosing.

It is this impossible system which American labor now challenges to a democratic reconstruction.

In spirit the challenge is revolutionary, but in terms it is moderate and generous.

Labor does not ask for more than a partnership in the common concern of getting a living.

It demands no confiscation; it urges no regime of force; it appeals on the basis of human right in the fellowship which we call democracy for the chance to maintain a high standard of life, the benefits of which will distribute among all.

It is a remarkable tribute to the restraint of the producing classes in our country that they should be content with so little when in many other portions of the world the producing classes are demanding and exacting everything.

It confirms the oft-expressed judgment of this newspaper that the real conservatives are the progressives, and that the dangerous foes of public tranquility are not the few inflamed extremists who invoke bitterness and violence, but the stubborn stand-patters of privilege, whose resistance to moderate reform excites bitterness and provokes revolution.

All that is best in these moderate demands of American producers—and most of them are not only good but exceedingly necessary—can be combined in a platform that will unite all of these elements and appeal powerfully to the fair-minded in other vocations.

Included in this platform should be a requirement for the proper care of the soldiers who have won this war.

And as both the old parties seem indifferent to them and neglectful of them, now that they no longer need them, the new party would be performing a great patriotic duty, and at the same time outlining a very popular policy, if it made care for the welfare of these defenders of our country an important plank in its platform.

Believers in these reforms who oppose a new party argue that the old parties can be coaxed into granting them by appeals from within.

But, as Mr. Hearst points out, the old parties are divided too much on issues that are dead and gone and are too much controlled by interests which do not want these reforms to come.

A party that should bring together like-thinking men and women of progressive outlook among the farmers, the organized workers and liberals in other callings would not have to coax the old parties or worry over their barnacles. It could win directly or compel the old parties to outspeed it.

Our latest new party, the Progressive party, fell apart after one effort because too many of its leaders wanted office more than they wanted unselfish results.

Its fate is a warning, but not against new parties. And, short of life though it was, the Progressive party made both the old parties quicken their steps.

It would tremendously hasten the progress of the common welfare in the United States if the great progressive groups among the farmers, among the organized toilers of the villages and cities, among the business men who are not extortionists or would-be profiteers and among the honorable professions should, as Mr. Hearst suggests, unite to put through "the popular measures which are possible of more or less immediate accomplishment."

The time was never more ripe.

Employment Fees

Editor Boston American:

It is my privilege to be petitioner of Massachusetts House Bill No. 20, a bill to regulate and restrict private employment agencies. This bill would limit all private employment agencies to a fee of one-half of the first week's salary. The present fee of the first full week's salary as charged by most agencies is considered excessive and the vast majority of the people forced to use private agencies are hardly in a position financially to pay such exorbitant rates. Many discharged sailors and soldiers will have occasion to use private agencies and it seems unfair to have them pay such a heavy fee for the right to return to civilian employment.

May I take this occasion of your kindness in printing this letter to ask your readers if they are interested in this legislation to give it their hearty support by being present at the hearing on the bill before the Committee on Legal Affairs (time to be announced later) and by having their names recorded as being in favor of this measure. If it is impossible for them to be present I will be pleased to read to the committee any letters that might be addressed to me in favor of the bill.

Are You a Bolshevist?
More Fighting Coming.
Two Leagues of Nations?
London-Versailles 2 Hours.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1919.)

Will sweet peace settle down on Europe without another little fight or two?

Probably not.

Jugo-Slavs have mobilized two hundred thousand fighting men within striking distance of the Italian army. The Jugo-Slavs claim the east side of the Adriatic, which would lay the whole Italian east coast open to their attack. The Italians say they cannot have that territory. Fighting is likely.

One of the biggest men in the United States government, and a really able man, said to this writer yesterday: "The world will be lucky if it doesn't find itself with two leagues of nations." There would be a nice, peaceful outlook on earth if the Allies and Americans formed one League of Nations, to maintain one kind of peace, and Germany, Russia, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria formed another League of Nations with another scheme for peace. When they met there would be trouble.

If Germany, Russia, Austria and Bulgaria should form a "peace league," ready, if necessary, to fight the other "peace league," which way would the neutrals drift? What would Spain, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway do, especially if they fail to get the representation they want at the Allies' conference?

"Experts" in Illinois, railway men and State officials, predict a continued labor shortage and high wages.

The secretary of the American Federation of Labor predicts a bread line with soldiers in it by next May.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa shows common sense and a desire to do something by introducing a bill to spend a hundred million dollars on public works in the United States, and thus make sure that men will be able to find a job if they want to work. We are to borrow fifty and sixty times a hundred million on the first of April, we are sending a little present of a hundred million to the hungry in Europe. The country might well appropriate another hundred million for permanent improvements in the United States, and temporary employment for soldiers and others that may need it.

And the country might, without straining itself, give soldiers, sailors and marines peace of mind by guaranteeing to each of them his salary for six months after his discharge, or until he finds a job.

Are you a Bolshevik? You may be, without knowing it. When Theodore N. Vail, formerly president of the telephone company, got out of bed yesterday morning, he did not know that he was a Bolshevist. But he knows it now, for Senator Sherman of Illinois says so. "Mr. Vail," said the Senator, "is a Bolshevist in disguise. He believes in government ownership of telegraph and telephone lines because that is the best method of unloading the American Telephone & Telegraph Company."

It was all right and quite reasonable for "the interests" to call anybody a Bolshevik that interfered with their plans, suggested continuing good pay for workers or anything of that kind.

But it is stretching Bolshevism to apply it to Mr. Vail, who has a few million anyhow and was chosen head of a concern that had scores of millions.

It was a great achievement when express trains and very fast boats across the channel made it possible to go from London to Paris in eight hours.

Last week an Englishman flew from London to Versailles in one hour and forty minutes in bad weather.

One day your small boy will take it as a matter of course when he reads that the flying time from New York city to London has been reduced to six hours. That will happen before 1950, surely, and probably before 1930.
